FLYIN' JENNY

HI, JENNY! GET ANY PICTURES OF MT. HOLOCAUST?
DON'T RUB IT IN, RICK. I'VE MADE A FEW DUM GUESSES BEFORE.
8-16-43
WHAT REALLY HAPPENED? WHERE'S THIS BIRD, ENDU?
YOU MEAN VON BURPOHEIM? I DOPPED HIM OVER THE HEAD ..TURNED THE SHIP OVER AND SPILLED HIM OUT.
HOW'D YOU FIND OUT ABOUT HIM ?
RADIO FROM COLONEL GRIFFIN.. HE'S BEEN TRYING TO GET YOU BY PHONE..FROM CHUNGKING! GUESS YOU'LL BE MOVING SOON.
RICK, WHERE'S BABE? IS SHE ALL RIGHT?
OH, SURE, ALTHOUGH SHE'S BEEN UP ALL NIGHT. SHE WENT TO RUSTLE SOMETHING TO EAT. I THINK.
COME AND GET IT!
DID YOU SAY BREAK-FAST? BUT WHERE?
8-17-43
RIGHT HERE. I FOUND A LITTLE COOK SHACK..DESERTED ..BUT THERE WAS FLOUR, LARD POWDERED EGGS, AND STUFF, SO I GOT BUSY.
BABE, DARLING, THIS IS SUPREME. BEST BREAKFAST I EVER HAD.
BEIN' HUNGRY HELPS. MORE COFFEE, RICK? IT'S PHONY, BUT HOT!
8-18-43
THANKS, BABE. THIS IS SWELL.
WHAT'S THE WAR NEWS, RICK.. I MEAN, HAVE YOU HEARD ANYMORE ABOUT THE BALK PLANS?
NOTHING DEFINITE, BUT SOMETHING BIG IS COOKING I HEAR THE TOP JERRIES ARE SHOVING OFF.
THEIR NUMBER IS UP..AND I THINK VON BURPOHEIM KNEW IT.....YES, BABE?
LONG DISTANCE PHONE CALL FOR YOU JENNY! ...CHINA!
JENNY RECEIVES A PHONE CALL FROM CHUNGKING, CHINA..
HELLO, COLONEL GRIFFIN, CAN I GO HOME NOW?
DON GRIFFIN, JENNY YOU'VE BEEN DOING ALL RIGHT.
VERY SOON..BUT I'D LIKE YOU TO COME AROUND BY WAY OF INDIA.
SWELL!..JUST ABOUT TEN THOUSAND MILES OUT OF MY WAY. YOU'LL ARRANGE DETAILS?
I'VE ALREADY DONE SO. UNTIL I SEE YOU..LUCK.
THANK YOU... BABE, RUN OUT AND BUY A COUPLE OF CORK HELMETS!
8-19-43
I HEAR THE CLIMATE'S AWFUL MUGGY IN INDIA. WHAT WE GOIN' THERE FOR?
BECAUSE WE'RE STILL UNOFFICIALLY ATTACHED TO ARMY INTELLIGENCE ...AND OBEYING ORDERS.
8-20-43
I'M GETTIN' HOMESICK, GEE, I AIN'T HEARD FROM LUKE IN A DOG'S AGE.
DON'T GET DOWN, BABE: THINK OF THE AMERICAN KIDS THAT ARE SCATTERED AROUND THE WORLD ...THEY'RE HOMESICK TOO.
YOU'RE RIGHT, JENNY I'M JUST A DOPE. IF THEY CAN STICK IT, I CAN.
ATTA GIRL. IT'S OUR WAR SAME AS THEIRS.
AMERICAN PLANE HAF ARRIVE FROM SARDEENY!
OVER THE HILLS AND FAR AWAY AGAIN, JENNY. AIRDALE SEEMS FAR AWAY TOO, DOESN'T IT?
IT IS, RICK. BUT WE HAVE A KNACK OF MEETING IN STRANGE PLACES, SO CHIN UP TILL NEXT TIME, FELLER.
SOME CHARIOT THEY SENT FOR US, SUGAR. AND IS THE PILOT HANDSOME..ME OH MY!
OUCH!
NOW, NOW, NONE OF THAT!

Yanks and Canadians Capture Kiska Easily

Japs Evacuate Hastily Before Allied Troops Arrive After Suffering Intense Air, Sea Attacks.

did when American forces captured Attu in the Aleutians earlier this year, but that myth has now been exploded.

Seizure of Kiska also gave the United States and its Allies an unbroken chain of air and naval bases clear across the Aleutians to Attu only 724 miles from important Japanese bases in the Kuriles.

The enemy seized Kiska on June 12, 1942, after having carried out a bombing raid on Dutch Harbor in Alaska a few days before.

Details of the recapture of Kiska were told by the navy in a three paragraph communique.

The text of the navy's 459th communique:

"A task force of the Pacific fleet has landed a force of United States and Canadian troops on Kiska, beginning on Aug. 15.

"No Japanese have been found."

There were indications of recent hasty evacuation of the Japanese garrison. Presumably, the heavy bombardments by our ships and planes that have been carried on for some time and the danger of their supply lines by our capture of Attu made the enemy positions on Kiska untenable.

"It is not known how the Japanese got away, but it is possible that enemy surface ships were able to reach Kiska under cover of the heavy fogs that have been prevalent.

"Since the air and surface bombardments in the latter part of July had apparently destroyed Japanese radio equipment on Kiska, the assumption was that they were not in communication with the homeland. Consequently, no release of Allied operations against Kiska has been made since July 31, as it would have conveyed information to the enemy which he otherwise would have not have had. This particularly applied to the period during which the transports were in areas exposed to enemy submarine attacks and while they were unloading."

Vice Admiral Thomas Cassin Kinkaid, a native of Hanover, N. H., was in charge of the Allied operations. They were carried out under general supervision of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Pacific fleet.

Simultaneously, the navy department issued other communiques covering the operations during the period of silence from July 30 until today. Although the communiques said there had been no reports since July 31, the report on that day actually brought operations up to the 30th of last month.

It was disclosed that American air forces in the interval of silence had carried out many air attacks on Kiska, sometimes as high as 20 a day.

On another day, light U. S. naval surface units bombarded Kiska and enemy installations at hourly intervals. The Japanese forces could not stand up under the merciless bombings and bombardments.

The Jap seizure of Attu and Kiska has cost the enemy heavily although they did manage to hold on to the islands for more than a year.

On June 3, 1942, the Japs sent two waves of bombing planes over Dutch Harbor, Alaska. Then on June 12, the Japs made their landing on Attu and Kiska.

The attack on the Aleutians was part of a two-prong thrust that the enemy had planned, first in the North Pacific, and then Against Midway.

The Jap forces were intercepted and soundly defeated at Midway. Since that time, American forces have sunk or damaged 59 Japanese warships and cargo vessels as they cut Jap supply lines.

The announcement of the recapture of Kiska was timed to coincide with the conference between Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt in Quebec.

It was the first time that Canadian forces had taken the battle field with Americans in the Pacific theater of war, and the fact that Canadian troops were used in the landing on Kiska suggested that from now on out there will be closer collaboration between Canada and the United States in fighting the Japanese in the Pacific.

When the Japs first seized Attu and Kiska, military analysts believed that the enemy had intended to try to make a full-scale landing in Alaska and use it as a base of operations against Canada and the Pacific coast states.

There was still a remote danger that Kiska might be used for such air attacks, but now the Japanese menace to Alaska and the west coast has been completely wiped out of the Aleutians.

There had been rumors for days that the United States was engaged in major operations in the Pacific and these were finally confirmed by the recapture of Kiska. It also was reported in Washington that still other air and sea blows are being planned against Japan to force the main Japanese fleet now hiding in its home waters to come out and fight.

DIES AT AGE 85

Mrs. George Franzen Taken By Death at Hospital.

Mrs. George Franzen, 85, of 361 Hammond avenue, died at General Hospital Friday afternoon. She had been confined to the hospital since May when she sustained a broken hip in a fall at her home.

Born in Austria-Hungary June 13, 1858, she came to Mansfield 20 years ago.

Surviving are her husband; a son, Michael Corneck, two stepsons Jacob and Joseph Franzen; two daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Schillinger and Mrs. Alexander Schaad, all of Mansfield; three step-daughters, Mrs. John Them of Mansfield, Mrs. Theresa Steinbach of Los Angeles, Calif., and Mrs. Joseph Laban of Chelsea, Mich., and a son and daughter in Austria.

The body is at the Geiger funeral home. Funeral services will be conducted at St. Peter's Catholic church Monday at 9:30 a. m. with Msgr. R. C. Goebel in charge. Burial will be in Mansfield Catholic cemetery.

DEATH TOLL UP

12 Now Known to Be Dead In Jersey Explosion.

KEARN, N. J.—(INS)—A mounting death toll was recorded today as rescuers probed the twisted mass of concrete and steel that was all remaining of the blasted Congoleum-Nairn Plant No. 12. So far there are 12 known dead and possibly as many as 15 more victims buried in the wreckage.

The explosion occurred Thursday night just as the shifts were changing. The building collapsed with a terrific explosion which shattered windows within a one-mile radius.

Four government agencies were investigating the blast, the FBI, army authorities, Kearny police and the Hudson county district attorney's office.

GETS MAXIMUM TERM

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Common Pleas Judge Myron B. Gessaman sentenced James D. Bursch, 25, of Canton to a maximum term of 15 to 90 years in the Ohio penitentiary yesterday when he pleaded guilty to several counts of automobile theft.

LABOR LEADING

Australian Election Returns Favoring Return of Curtin.

SYDNEY — (U.P.) — First returns in the Australian parliamentary election three hours after the polls close tonight appeared to mark a trend toward the return to power of the labor government headed by Prime Minister John Curtin.

In the first general election in nearly three years, all 76 seats in the house of representatives and 19 of the 36 in the senate were being contested.

Nazi facade of Europe. Indirect reports from Helsinki said prominent Finland leaders were demanding that the government seek a separate peace with Russia.

On the heels of new unrest reports from Denmark, King Christian was said to have arranged to see Werner Best, Hitler's representative, to work out some method of preventing German relations with conquered Denmark from worsening.

The big British bombers that have pounded the continent with increasing fury from Britain took a night off last night, presumably because of bad weather.

On the Soviet front, Russian planes and artillery loosed a hail of shells and bombs into a 13-mile wide corridor through which the Nazis are trying to escape a trap at Kharkov. Ground forces pounded both flanks of the corridor.

Sumy, a German base 100 miles northwest of Kharkov, appeared to have been doomed by capture of Lebedein, 27 miles to the southwest, as the Red army drove forward in an apparent attempt to split the Nazi central and southern front armies.

The seizure of Lebedin put the Russians at the westernmost point of their advance last winter.

For the second time in a week, indirect European reports told of German efforts to build defenses as far back as Poland against the chance that the Russian drive will turn their defeats into a rout.

FIFTH TO SERVE

Another Son of Gen. Chennault Enters Armed Forces.

SHREVEPORT, La.—(AP)—Robert Kenneth Chennault, 18, son of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of the 14th air force in China, reported here yesterday for induction into the armed forces.

Robert was the general's fifth son to enter the armed services.

tributed to the scantiness of the average citizen's vocabulary.

The venerable professor was considered by many as an integral part of the American educational system. His novel methods of instruction drew considerable attention both from his fellow pedants and from students.

While in his early days at Yale, more conservative members of the faculty shied from his methods, his classes were jammed by under-graduates who appreciated his theory that literature should be "entertaining and diverting."

Dr. Phelps is survived by a brother, Prof. Arthur F. Phelps, a retired clergyman, of Berkeley, Calif.; a niece, Mrs. William Fogg Osgood, of Belmont, Mass.; a nepher, the Rev. Dryden Phelps, a missionary stationed at the West China university in Changtu, China; and a grand-nephew, William Lyon Phelps II, of Belmont, Mass., student at Swarthmore college.

Funeral services will be held in Battell Chapel, Monday afternoon at 2:30, with the Rev. Sidney Lovett, officiating. Burial will be in Grove Street cemetery.

Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale university, in a statement issued today deplored the loss of Dr. Phelps, whom he ranked as "among the greatest teachers in our history."

Seabees Take Only 3 Days To Make Munda U. S. Air Base

manding officer issued orders saying he wanted each one to work 48 hours a day—in other words, to double their efforts.

On the night before Head's landing, the men asked permission to continue their work regardless of any alerts. And they stayed on the job out in the open during the air raid to speed completion of the project . . . accurate anti-aircraft fire drove away the enemy planes, but not before one had been shot down in flames.

Soon after Head brought his ship down on the runway, others followed to put the base into actual operation. I landed in the first transport, on which I had "hitchhiked" from the Russell islands.

I watched one after another of our planes take off and land today while I talked with Chief Machinist's Mate Wilmert Gamble of Shreveport, La., who was directing a group of Seabees removing destroyed Japanese Zero planes. The Zeros were half burned on the edge of the field.

Bomb craters about every five feet showed the effectiveness of our attacks during five weeks of bitter fighting. Trees were stripped of branches; in some areas, there were no trees at all.

It is a scene of desolation except where the Americans are working and living.

I found the commanding officer of our Munda air forces in a tent containing a bare cot with one blanket and one camp stool. He wore mud-splattered trousers and an old torn jacket with no insignia. The sweat was running down his face, but he was all smiles. He was proud of his men.

A soldier wrote to his pastor, "There is one thing I would like to pass on to the rest of the boys going into the service, and to every one else, for that matter. Don't wait until you need God before you call on him. If a sixteen-inch shell lands on him, a man is not going to have time enough to pray. It took bombs, bullets and shellfire to make me see the light, but now I will never be without God.

"I went to my tent and prayed. I didn't ask God to save our lives; I asked him to forgive us our sins and if we had to die to let us die knowing that we were coming home to God. Most of my buddies, they told me, were doing the same thing."

Here is a valuable suggestion for us. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

The Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. reports that more than 3,000 missionaries are conducting mission projects in 48 states, Alaska, and the West Indies.

The First Church, Knoxville, Tenn., Dr. F. F. Brown, pastor, leads the Southern Baptist Convention in its gifts to missions. Last year, it gave for missions $81,896, or $36.25 per member.

General MacArthur, laying a hand on the Bible, told a Queensland official of the Commonwealth Council of the British and Foreign Bible Society: "However tired I may be, I never go to bed without reading a portion of this Book." This story is reported by the Australian (Anglican) Board of Missions.

Prompted by the horrors of the Detroit race riots in June, the Columbia Broadcasting station will give an Open Letter drama, Saturdays 7 to 7:30 p. m. EWT. This drama proposes to bring to the consciousness of the American people the danger of intolerance.

Methodists rejoice for the first time in many years that the Board of Foreign Missions is out of debt. The amount contributed for world-wide missions and educational work for the fiscal year ending May 31 is $4,838,687, an increase of 11.9 per cent over 1942. In addition to this $880,944 was given for emergency war-time needs for relief, expansion of missionary work in Latin America and for increased religious ministry to men and women in the armed forces of the country.

The successor to Bishop A. W. Leonard, chairman of the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains, who lost his life in a plane crash in Iceland, May 3, is the Rev. Dr. William Oaugh, the Slated clerk of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, a member of the American Legion, and chaplain of the 28th division of the army in World War I.

There's nothing objectionable about knowing your own capacity, if you don't talk about it but perform. It is just as bad a fault to underestimate yourself and allow a defeatist spirit. Self-confidence comes from the consciousness of being sufficiently prepared. One's judgment of himself must be sober, and one's conclusions must be based on facts.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, AUGUST 21, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—you can go further if you go slower.

The only reason that hay fever seems funny to a majority of people is that a majority of people do not have hay fever.

From another city comes a listing of cards seen in a cafe window: "Dishwashers Wanted," "Waiters Wanted," "Chef Wanted," "Cashier Wanted," "Business for Sale."

Talk of Alliance With Britain

TALK ABOUT a post-war alliance between the United States and Great Britain is interesting but not surprising. "Friendship for all and entangling alliances with none" has been the established policy of the United States from the beginning, and it seems unlikely that this basic policy will be discarded.

But obviously a great change has occurred in the relations of the two nations. Throughout the present war, first informally and then more and more frankly, in defending themselves and other free nations, Britain and America have operated virtually as one. Present plans and resources of the two great English-speaking civilizations are so interwoven, for mutual defense and support, that it will obviously be difficult to unscramble them—at least for some time to come.

Perils to which both nations have been subjected, in the Teutonic and Japanese onslaughts against freedom and for the mastery of the world, have welded them into a unit for the purposes of this war, at least.

It is hardly conceivable that either branch of this race will really surrender its sovereignty to the other. But each needs the other, and will probably continue to do so, for mutual safety and world peace. And some close, practical form of permanent co-operation might well be worked out, short of political union, but perpetuating the present mutual good will and helpfulness.

'Rights' Presuppose Good Behavior

ONE DAY this week Drew Pearson, in his "Washington Merry-Go-Round" column, made reference to suspicions of federal officials that bootlegging of liquor is on the increase.

Mansfield has just had a concrete example that seems to bear out this suspicion. A Mansfield man is now serving a 40-day sentence in the county jail after pleading guilty to charges of illegally possessing liquor and exhibiting gambling devices at an established place of business.

The man has a bad record. He has been arrested "at least 20 times in the last 25 years" on charges which include fraud, bootlegging and operating lewd shows.

He is one of those who accepts "rights" and privileges of American citizenship without recognizing that responsibility for good behavior is inseparable from enjoyment of "rights."

It seems not unreasonable to ask of those who choose to make Mansfield their home that they conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens of this community and conform to reasonable restraints which long experience has shown to be advisable.

Industry's Postwar Responsibility

WISE RECOGNITION that private industry must be depended upon to provide the bulk of employment after the war is given by the National Resources Planning Board in its report to the president on a plan for postwar demobilization.

"Expanding peacetime industry is the only answer to the demobilization of war industry," said the board. "The bulk of employment must be furnished by private industry and important efforts are being made to this end by various groups in the country."

Already industry has indicated its willingness to assume the burden of providing employment. Frederick C. Crawford, president of the National Association of Manufacturers has stated that "industry unhesitatingly accepts the nomination as job-giver." All industry asks is the necessary amount of freedom to go about the job.

The NRPB report will be transmitted by the president to congress. It is to be hoped that there the theory of it will be transformed to concrete actions designed to render industry capable of assuming the heavy burden.

Some 'Air Mail' Goes By Train

ONLY HYPERCRITICAL persons are likely to be disturbed by the report from a reliable Washington correspondent that considerable "air mail" never leaves the ground nowadays—that it is transported by train.

Under ordinary conditions this would be annoying, to say the least, but explanation given by postal authorities, who are said to have admitted the practice, is that "the war is to blame"—so the public is tolerant.

Demands on commercial air lines for passenger, express and mail transport have exceeded facilities, and a plea now seems in order to use other means of transportation, whenever possible, instead of resorting to air service.

Except for the extra speed of cross-continent mail delivery, train transportation of mail would seem to meet all ordinary purposes and there is just a possibility that some individuals and firms have adopted use of air mail service as an effectation rather than a real need.

So, to the slogan, "Do not make long distance telephone calls unless absolutely necessary," may now be added, "Avoid sending a letter air mail except in emergency."

Avoid Waste of Soap

SOAP becomes harder to get. The difficulty is in the fat supply. Manufacturers could cheapen their products but those who have built up national reputations over many years do not want to do so. They prefer to maintain quality.

This is understandable, but some of them may have to alter their product and give the war quality soap a distinctive name, such as "B grade." That is a possible solution. Another depends on the housewife and is twofold. She should save fats with great care and turn them in faithfully. Then she should be thrifty, not letting soap melt uselessly away or using more than needed.

Someone suggests giving Mussolini a job feeding Haille Selassie's pet lions—which would at least give him opportunity to "live dangerously."

Reader thinks it should be explained that "vice versa" has nothing to do with objectionable poetry.

THE COSMIC KIBITZER

Abandonment of Berlin Would Display Prussian Characteristic

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

ONE of the most interesting pieces of news to come out of Germany since the war began—and it's one of the most important, if true—is the report that the whole Nazi government has abandoned Berlin.

While this is unconfirmed, it does come on the heels of the evacuation of a million residents of the threatened capital. Maybe Hitler's infallible intuition has enabled him to read the Allied program which has been set forth at Quebec by British Minister of Information Brendan Bracken thus pointedly:

"These plans are to bomb and burn and ruthlessly destroy, in every way available to us, the people responsible for creating this war."

One could wish, by the way, that the fuehrer might have heard Bracken deliver that edict. I wasn't present, but I know the minister as one of England's most colorful personalities.

He's a big chap who pours out conviction in a torrent of forceful words, while his victim is held fascinated by the brilliant red hair which flares up from Bracken's head like the flames from a blast furnace. Yes, it's a pity Hitler wasn't there.

For any normal government—which of course the Nazi regime is not—desertion of the national capital is like abandonment of ship at sea. It's an act that denotes desperation.

Thus the head of a government and his chief ministers cling to their capital as a sea captain sticks to his bridge. They're among the last to leave. When they do go, it means they have small hope that the first city of the nation will survive.

During the height of the terrible aerial blitz which London endured in 1940-41, when the British ship of state was wallowing in mountainous seas, the square-jawed Churchill and his cabinet stuck to the bridge. True, some archives and subordinate offices were moved out of London, but for the prime minister and his government to flee the capital would have been regarded as an admission of defeat, both at home and abroad.

BACK in 1941 when Hitler's victorious armies were surging towards Moscow, the Soviet authorities moved the diplomatic corps to Kuibyshev. But Stalin and the other members of the Red government coolly carried on at the old stand, as an inspiration and a guarantee of security to the peoples of all the Russias.

Now nobody suggests for a moment that if Hitler and his government have moved, or do move, it's because of cowardice. The Germans are brave enough.

Abandonment of the German capital would mean (1) that Berlin is in peril of destruction, and (2) that the Prussian militarists are exhibiting one of their outstanding characteristics—a disinclination to risk their necks unless it's absolutely necessary.

We have an illustration of this characteristic in the Prussian military policy that German officers shall not lead their men into battle, excepting in case of necessity. That tough task is left to the non-commissioned officers. The reason given for this is that officers are difficult to replace, and so should direct operations from behind the lines where they won't get killed.

There are, of course, variations to this. German officers will fight quick enough and hard enough if it's necessary. When the noncoms are out of action, the officers jump in and do their bit. Indeed, some like Marshal Rommel lead their men into action from preference. But those cases are the exception.

The Prussian is a wholly cold-blooded individual who places small value on the other fellow's life, but likes to avoid trouble himself.

Anyway, while the Prussian wouldn't stick by his capital the way a Briton or a Yankee or a Russian would, neither would he desert it unless it were in grave peril. If Hitler and his government are taking cover we may be sure that Germany's war crisis is indeed acute.

This isn't to suggest that the Nazis are on the point of surrendering for there's bitter fighting ahead.

Listen World!

School Ideas Changing

SALUTE to Col. Hans C. Adamson! Col. Adamson was one of the men who floated over 21 ghastly days on the Pacific aboard Eddie Rickenbacker's lost raft. Now he is on loan to the United States Office of Education, and here's hoping that he passes on some of the wisdom and vision he must have found during that long agony.

As proof that he has, he is now touring the nation addressing high school student bodies and parent-teacher groups and in every lecture he warns Young America to complete its high school courses before induction into army, navy or home defense movement.

"Nothing," says he, "should be allowed to interfere with the education of the boys who will be fighting the nation's battles tomorrow and running its affairs the day after tomorrow."

It listens lovely. But no one would be quicker than Col. Adamson himself to hint that "getting an education" means merely "going to school." Like every other institution in America our educational system must undergo drastic changes during this crisis. Or else.

Three years ago our average high school curriculum didn't even prepare Junior to wash his neck, much less defend his nation. Worse yet, many of even our best educators did all that was in their power to defend Junior against all harsh reality including neck washing. The beautiful theory was that if you protected and guided Junior sufficiently through his high school years—and if possible through college, he would automatically lead an unscarred and successful life.

With all due respect for the sincerity of such theorists, let me quickly add that their notion was nuts. And resulted in some spineless and bewildered adolescents than any program since Adam.

The simple truth—and Col. Adamson will corroborate it—is that the human animal needs to be shoved around some whether he's 7, 17 or 70. He needs to make a fool of himself and take the consequences. He can and should be guided and advised to a certain extent but never to the point where he won't have to tangle with reality.

SHORTLY after Pearl Harbor a mighty row arose between our largest city schools and the army and navy—all three institutions being deeply entrenched in traditions and snootiness. However, the army and navy had been bombed wide awake. The schools hadn't. Whereupon our various war chiefs insisted that the schools cut out the la-de-dah courses and install instead sternly practical defense equipment and instruction. At which point many of our educators screamed themselves blue in the face.

What—take this fresh and lovely flower of America and subject it to crude contact with war? Strike out culture and go heavy on the commandos, welders and other practical units? The thought was unspeakable even when the navy offered to provide equipment for such courses. They were still greeted as an abomination.

For months the row continued. But today there are few high schools which do not teach the essentials of militant citizenship. And that doesn't merely mean math or aeronautics. It means downright sweating over war machines, strict drill which makes football and track look like kindergarten games and, first of all, a complete reversal of the idea that Junior "mustn't be hurt."

It means discipline and disagreement, practical criticism and tough competition and all the harsh shaping up processes which go toward making a fully rounded human being, mentally, morally and spiritually.

And that, I suspect, is what Col. Adamson is trying to tell America. More power to him if he puts it across and what a difference it will make in that demoralized institution, the Great American Home!

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, August 21, 1923.

William E. Isaly, 62, founder of the Isaly Dairy company, died.

New law providing for nonpartisan election of members of school board became effective and John F. Kramer and E. M. Olin were endorsed by several civic organizations.

Pageant was given by children who had participated in the summer playground program at Johns park.

Mrs. J. L. Stevens, North Mulberry street, was hostess at a dinner party given as a farewell to Mrs. A. C. Lantz, soon to leave for Honolulu.

Miss Marie Berno returned to New York after spending summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Berno.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Van Fossen, 131 South Diamond street.

Dr. Allyn M. King, 51, of Crafton, Pa., died at the home of his brother, Rufus H. King, 18 Parker street.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Oliver Hazard Perry was born in South Kingston, Rhode Island, Aug. 21, 1785. He was the son of a naval officer and one of five brothers who became distinguished naval officers.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Blame Excessive Labor Turnover For Lag In Production of Planes

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

FATHERHOOD does not exclude any man from making his contribution to victory."

Thus bluntly did War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt launch a new and far-reaching program to put every able-bodied man aged 18 to 38 in war work or the armed services. The goal: To add 2,000,000 persons to the armed services and 1,600,000 to the war labor force by next July 1.

The program added 60 occupations and 58 activities—including "the status of idleness"—to the list of nondeferable civilian jobs. Observers saw in McNutt's program a "last chance" invitation to American men to get into war work voluntarily.

Next step, it was predicted, will be a labor draft similar to the Austin-Wadsworth bill for compulsory national service which was introduced in congress last February. During the week reports persisted in Washington that it would be pressed again, this time with presidential backing, unless the WMC's latest drive succeeds.

With many aircraft workers in the West leaving work to take employment at higher pay in shipyards, others seeking permanent post-war jobs, the aircraft industry alone will need 600,000 new workers before the end of the year.

Labor turnover has been widely blamed for an eight per cent lag in plane production in July—7,373 planes produced against 8,000 scheduled.

At Home

Balanced Gas Rations.

Chief sufferers under fuel rationing have been the 9,000,000 automobile drivers of the eastern states.

While the west, with fewer cars, has had 550,000 barrels of gasoline daily, the east has been restricted to 328,000, its A-card value placed at three gallons to the west's four. Since January pleasure driving has been banned on the eastern seaboard.

Transportation difficulties caused the differential.

During the week a move for equalization got under way, made halting progress as the first flow of oil from the Big Inch pipeline at last came through.

First announcement tending toward equality was that A, B and C coupons in the Midwest and Southwest would be worth three gallons instead of four.

Two days later the OPA made a conditional promise of an extra half gallon of gasoline a week to eastern motorists, and a lifting of the pleasure-driving ban by Sept. 1. Bus lines prepared to restore old schedules.

But new OPA Chief Chester Bowles warned that increased gas allotment would depend on strict compliance with non-essential driving bans before that date.

Blow at Optimism.

Sobering words on the progress of the war at home and abroad were aimed at Americans by James F. Byrnes in his second radio address since becoming OWM director. He said:

"We have every reason for confidence in an ultimate overwhelming victory over both Germany and Japan, but I am authorized by the president to say that in his judgment, as of today, the major battles lie ahead of us, not behind us."

"We have met and defeated less than seven per cent of the combat divisions which the enemy has in the European area . . .

"Our heroic Russian allies have been fighting against approximately 40 per cent of the enemy's European combat divisions. So the enemy has been using less than half his combat divisions in actual battle, while the Allies have been using nearly three-quarters of all their combat troops which are in the general European area."

"What we have gained is . . . the initiative, and Allied morale, materiel and resources are increasing while those of the enemy are decreasing."

"There is nothing to justify the hope of unconditional surrender by the Axis powers in the near future."

Conference at Quebec.

To the Plains of Abraham, where in 1759 General Wolfe won the St. Lawrence region from France, came Franklin D. Roosevelt for his sixth official wartime meeting with Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Leaving his special train at Wolfe's Cove, the president motored up winding old-world streets to the Citadel.

While an American flag whipped from a pole on the King's bastion, beside the Union Jack and the Canadian red ensign, and a band of Canadian Royal Mounties played the Star Spangled Banner, British and Canadian troops presented arms in slow cadence as a welcoming salute.

Later began the parleys which many observers said were designed to figure out how the Allies can best capitalize on successes in Russia and Sicily, in the air over Germany.

Abroad

Sicilian Wind-Up.

During the week, the climax came swiftly in the conquest of Sicily by United States, Canadian and British troops. It came when the American Seventh army stormed into the escape port of Messina, to be soon followed by General Bernard Montgomery's British Eighth Army which had fought its way along the eastern coastal road.

Axis troops abandoned huge stores of equipment, lost about 140,000 prisoners in their rout, but Messina was no Cape Bon. Most of the enemy crossed the narrow waters of Messina Strait, though at the end the opposite shore was under artillery fire from American "Long Toms." On the final night Axis troops were aided by a total eclipse of the moon. Roving Allied warships and planes could not halt the 15-minute crossings of swift motor boats and other craft.

Italy Blasted.

Even as Messina fell, Allied airmen were ranging far up the Italian peninsula to speed the internal collapse of the derelict Axis partner.

Naples, Turin, Milan were blasted in raids from North Africa and England. Rome took a second pounding which led Marshal Badoglio to declare it was to be made an open city. In Milan, refugees streamed to the countryside, demonstrators demanded peace.

And on the toe of the boot, frontline conditions prevailed as artillery on the Sicilian side hurled a barrage of fire on what even the German experts admitted soon might become a new Allied bridgehead.

Orel Post-Mortem.

In Russia, for the first time, U. S. correspondents were taken to the front to see grim evidence of German barbarities, at newly-recaptured Orel.

AP Correspondent Henry Cassidy reported that of a peacetime population of 114,000 only 30,000 Russians remained after 22 months of terror and starvation. Soviet authorities, he said, estimated that 12,000 were killed by the invaders, 14,000 sent to work in Germany last month.

Meanwhile, the Red Army continued its three-pronged offensive beyond Kharkov, toward Bryansk and Smolensk.

Thrust In Solomons.

What the Yanks did in the Aleutians they accomplished again in the Solomons with a surprise invasion of Vella Lavella Isiand, 28 miles north of Kolombangara. The latter island was left in Japanese hands—for the present.

So unexpected was this by-pass by General MacArthur's men that they were able to capture 350 Japanese prisoners without firing a shot. Many of the captives had previously fled Vila on Kolombangara, to escape U. S. bombings.

Quotes

President Roosevelt: "I give the Filipino people my word that the Republic of the Philippines will be established the moment the power of our Japanese enemies is destroyed."

Frederick C. Crawford, president National Association of Manufacturers: "The first necessary step to postwar jobs is to make it possible for industry to accumulate sufficient funds to reconvert from a war economy to peacetime operations. The earnings which industry should set aside are being taxed away.

others were Japanese seamen who had survived the sinking of more than 16 cruisers and destroyers by U. S. warships in the two battles of Kula Gulf.

Most important gain of the operation, however, was the foothold it offered for future attacks on the important enemy base of Kahili on Bougainville Island, only 80 miles to the north.

Air Drive.

Since February, the Japanese have lost about 1,000 planes in the Solomons. Thirty-four of these were downed in bombing attacks aimed at the American landing on Vella Lavella.

Allied fliers scored another spectacular success during the week, when they dropped 10,000 bombs on airdromes at Wewak, caught enemy planes lined up wing-to-wing. It was an aerial Pearl Harbor. At a cost of only three Allied craft, 120 Japanese planes were wrecked, 1,500 men killed.

Communiques said it was the biggest raid yet in the Southwest Pacific.

Timely Editorial

Ersatz Meat.

Apparently oblivious to a prospective beer drought, a St. Louis brewery is in large scale production of synthetic beefsteak for lend-lease shipment. The formula:

Mix yeast with water and molasses, treat it with ammonia which converts the yeast to protein. Stir in air and after 12 hours out comes meat.

It is said this ersatz meat will satisfy "the most sensitive palate" at one-fifth the cost of natural beef.

We might ask, what beef, but skip, it. The present is no time for skepticism. It is an era of chemical miracles, but it is to be hoped, if not too confidently expected, that the brewers will do a better job on near meat than some of them did on near beer for the duration of prohibition. —Toledo Blade

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

Twice Warmed

ON MY WAY out from the city toward our village, I overtook an old man with a double bitted ax upon his shoulder. I noticed he looked back when he heard my car. I stopped and wearily he got in. He held the smooth hickory handle between his knees.

"My but I'm tired!" he said. "Just live down in the village, but that seems twice as far now as it was this morning, even though it is down hill."

"Where do you work?" I wondered.

"I'm cutting wood up there, on the shares. Coal is expensive, and it's needed to win the war, so I said to Manda I'll try cuttin' our winter's wood. I have a right smart pile, a'ready, and the owner'll haul my share to my place for me.

"There's a sayin' a person who cuts his own wood warms himself twice. I sure warmed myself once a'ready, and if the Lord's willing, 'twill warm me and Manda again. That's why I'm working.

"I'll be 78 next January. I've always planned to get in my fuel around October. Used to run a farm, but I got too old, so we moved into the village. Sold out when times wasn't too good. But with our garden, chickens and cow we manage as well as old people can."

"Don't you get a pension?"

"No—not yet. We both feel like as long as we can get along alone we won't apply. But if we get sick, it might be different. I claim a help like that's all right for them that needs it—but not us, yet."

When I came to the street where he lived, I waited long before his stiffened legs would permit him to go with any assurance. I watched him take up his ax as though it were very precious. Then he turned and said.

"Thank you, a thousand times. No one knows how wonderful good it feels to have a ride home like that. Generally people think I'm just another old man, and pass me by. I guess they don't understand that they may get old sometime, too."

I watched to see him enter his modest little home, and heard the kind old voice of his Manda welcome him. And I knew, if he did not, that what he had given was more than my slight favor to him could ever be. I saw the joy of a real home—a devotion that made me glad.

HELL AND HIGH WATER

By William McLeod Raine

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER I

Dust stirred by the horses' hoofs sifted into every wrinkle of their clothes. Despite the protecting bandannas fine particles floated into throats and nostrils. The sweatstained withers of the animals were streaked with it.

The moon rode over the horizon big and red. The stars came out. They filled a garish world with beauty. A silvery magic filled the night, a hint of mystery that stirred in Bob Lee dreams he did not expect to come true.

Except when Bob broke into a snatch of song or made a remark that drew a throaty grunt from his companion, they rode in silence. For Cleburn Hightower, full-blooded Choctaw Indian, was sparing of words.

The friends jogged along at a road gait. Since leaving the J A B ranch they had ridden nearly forty miles. Before that they had been in the saddle working stock since the break of day. They expected to dance most of the night and get back to the ranch about noon to join a hunt for strays.

From the big new Merrill barn at Cale Station came the sound of a fiddle, the shuffling of feet, the buzz of voices and the sing-song chant of the caller. In the cottonwood grove they fastened their horses along with twenty others. From the thongs back of the cantle they untied slickers wrapped about the clothes they meant to wear at the dance.

They retired to the corral where the windmill was clicking, stripped and bathed in the horse trough, after which they hung their soiled clothes on the corral fence.

As the two men moved toward the barn they offered a sharp contrast. The Indian moved with a long flat-footed stride. He was tall, straight, broad-shouldered and with the high cheek bones. Small and light, Lee carried himself with rhythmic ease, almost jauntily, in spite of the high-heeled boots that threw the weight of his body forward and made walking difficult.

As was usual at country dances a dozen men were clustered around the wide barn door. A shift in the position of one of them showed for a moment a sharp-featured foxlike face flung against the light.

"Dyke Sims peddling his poison brew again," Lee commented. "Merrill ought to make him pull his freight."

As they watched, Sims detached himself from the group and headed toward the south end of the grove where a cart stood. The bootlegger was going to get another jug of liquor to sell. A sudden impulse seized the cowboy.

"'Lo, Dyke," he called. "You sure are an oasis in a thirsty land. Lead us to yore Choctaw beer."

Choctaw beer was a local concoction made of barley, hops, and fishberries, plus a percentage of bad whisky, a raw, vicious compound.

"That's how I like to hear young fellows talk," Sims replied. "You got to have yore fun."

"I'm going to have mine now," Lee told him with a chuckle.

On the way to the grove Lee picked up a two-by-four about three feet long. He climbed over the wheel of the cart and with two blows of the club crushed the top of the barrel. Tilting it he let the liquor pour to the ground.

Sims stared in angry surprise. "What you doing, you blame fool?" he shouted, and reached for his gun.

The strong fingers of the Indian closed on the wrist of the man, twisted the revolver from his hand and flung it into the tall grass fifty feet away. While Lee emptied the second keg, the cursing peddler struggled to escape from Hightower's grip. On his small-featured evil face was stamped a venemous hatred. He threatened revenge.

Bob Lee paid no attention to his ravings. "Light a shuck outa here right now," he ordered.

"I'll see what the Hickorys have to say about that," the peddler blustered.

"You won't see what anyone has to say," Lee differed. "You'll git."

Though the Five Nations made their own laws and enforced them, the United States made one stipulation. No liquor was to be taken into the terriory and none was to be manufactured there. There were many violations, but Sims knew that the punishment for a conviction of a white man was severe. If he was arrested by one of the native police and turned over to a United States marshall, he would be dragged to Judge Parker's court at Fort Smith and probably sentenced to a long term in the penitentiary. Sobbing with rage, the bootlegger hitched up his team and drove away into the night.

As the cowboys drew near the barn a red-headed youth greeted them with a whoop. "Reps from the J A B," he shouted. "Come in and get yore feet weet."

Timmy Boggs, a Choctaw police officer, spoke to the newcomers. "'Lo, Bob—Cle! Everything fine on the ranch?"

"Fair to middling, Timmy. We need rain." Bob grinned. "We're not toting any guns if that's what is bitin' you."

"That's bully good," the officer approved.

The J A B riders stayed for a few minutes with the stag line at the door exchanging greetings with white acquaintances and citizens of the Nation with varying percentages of Indian blood. Jim Merrill, the host, was a quarterbreed.

The redhead stood back of Lee, who was on tiptoe searching over the shoulder of the man in front of him for a certain girl.

"Distinguished company with us tonight," the redhead Floyd murmured in Lee's ear. "The Hickorys are here—pretty nearly the whole caboodle of them—big as cuffey and ugly as sin."

This was disturbing. Usually the Hickorys did not attend the neighborhood frolics. They kept to themselves and sneered at such gatherings. Bob's roving eye picked out Jake Hickory. He was watching Willie May Broderick. The man had never met her. A mixed breed, he was outside the pale. His covetous gaze stirred in the cowboy an indignant resentment. Bob worked for J. A. Broderick, and when his daughter had been a little girl he had gone to school with her in Texas. Even then the dainty little miss, in pigtails and with a front tooth missing, had been precious to the rough boy. Her cheerful, friendly grin had warned him.

The Hickorys were a bad lot. Their father had been a white from Arkansas, a worthless drifter who had crossed the line and married a half-breed Choctaw girl to get the benefit of citizenship in the nation. The five sons, all big and tough, were suspected of running other men's cattle through the southern counties into Kansas and New Mexico. None of them worked, but they spent money freely. Where they got it was a mystery.

When the quadrille ended Lee's eyes followed Willie May to her seat on the benches by the wall. Her partner had been Hiram Sugg, a handsome, well-dressed man with a gay and carefree smile. Flatbacked and broad-shouldered, he carried himself with graceful ease. A coming man in the country, people said of him, one who would travel deservedly a long way to success. Miss Broderick had never looked at any other man with such starry-eyed admiration as she did Sugg.

Jake Hickory moved across the floor, his snaky eyes fixed on Willie May. Bob guessed what was in his mind and followed close. He did not like this set-up. Hickory was staring at the girl with black, hungry eyes.

Willie May looked up and saw him. Her glance passed him, to find Bob Lee at the man's heels.

"Come and shake a foot with me, girl," Hickory said.

She smiled a little but there was no smile in the deep blue eyes that looked into his. "I am dancing with Mr. Lee."

Jake swung round and glared at Bob. "I got here first," he snarled.

Bob was not looking for trouble with any Hickory, but neither was he running away. As an employe of her father it was his duty to look after Willie May. Moreover, it gave him a fierce, keen pleasure.

"You heard Miss Broderick," he said evenly.

"Yeah, I heard her. Do you claim you're any better than me, you two-bit cow hand?"

"I don't claim anything, except that I'm dancing with Miss Broderick." Bob offered her his arm and they walked out on the floor.

Opposite them stood Sam Hickory and Jessie MacPherson. More trouble, Lee thought. For this gentle, soft-eyed lass, part Scot and part Indian, was Cleburn Hightower's girl. If they were not engaged, the two were close to it. Yet Sam was showing open and offensive familiarity.

"Another of the Hickorys," Bob said to his partner in a low voice.

"How dare they come here, after they have been drinking, to dance with decent girls?" Willie May asked, the color hot in her cheeks.

Lee did not answer. The first steps of the quadrille interfered Obeying the orders of the caller, he left her, to return again with a strange happiness in his heart. He had danced with her before, as the casual acquaintance might, a little awed and embarrassed when his arm went around her. But this was different. She had turned to him in an awkward situation, not because he was her father's hired man on horseback but because she understood him well enough to be sure of him. He had moved a step nearer her, and he did not mean ever to lose that gain if he could help it.

She said, in a low lovely voice, "He's looking at us, with murder in his eyes. You don't think . . ."

The men circled outside the women, and Bob took occasion to include Jake Hickory in his sweeping glance. The man was standing against the wall glowering at him angrily.

"Did you notice?" the girl whispered when Bob returned to her. "You don't think he'll make trouble?"

"If he doesn't like it that needn't worry you and me," he said lightly.

That was how he felt for the moment. The light, supple body of the girl was in his arms, warm and responsive. Her smiling, lovely face was upturned to his. All the Hickorys in the world could not rob him of that.

"Maybe I oughtn't to have come," Willie May suggested. "I've never been to one of these before. Father thought I had better not, but he let me come just this once—with Mr. Sugg."

Bob did not express an opinion, though he agreed with J. A. Broderick, a Texas cattleman who had leased and fenced a large tract in the Choctaw Nation. But he was an outsider who had nothing to do with the life of the tribe, and this dance was given by a tribesman. To allow his daughter to go might bring unpleasant complications, since its way of life was not hers. She was out of place here. Born of a family of means, the girl had been educated at Austin in a young ladies' academy.

"You think I shouldn't be here," she challenged.

What he thought didn't matter.

"Many of the Choctaws are fine people. Most of them are a heap more decent than plenty of white folks in this country. It's a wild place and criminals have flocked here from all over. Generally they act all right, but sometimes they don't."

"So I should have stayed on the ranch."

"Yes."

"But it was all right for you to come, of course."

She became a birdie in a cage and he joined hands with the other men to circle round her. When he was alone with her again he replied.

"You heard Hickory call me a two-bit cow hand. It's all right for me to be here, but you are Miss Broderick."

He was right. She knew that when she saw Sam Hickory swing Jessie MacPherson so violently that she was swept from her feet and fell to the ground. The man was drunk.

Hightower had been watching Jessie and Sam Hickory, the eyes in his impassive face showing none of the quick resentment that burned in him. He reached Jessie and helped her to her feet. As he started to lead her to a seat Sam Hickory blocked the way.

"I'm dancing with this girl," he blustered.

"You were," Hightower corrected. "She dance no more now."

The drunken man caught at the wrist of the frightened girl, but Cleburn flung him back. The ruffian gave a roar of rage and charged. The Indian caught him by the hair and sent him sliding along the floor. Two of his brothers ran forward, but Tommy Boggs was on the scene first.

"No make trouble," he urged, and stood in front of Cleburn and Jessie, facing the bad men.

Sam got up furious. Jake and Ed Hickory held him back. Powerful though the gang was, it could not defy the police force of the Choctaw Nation.

Hiram Sugg's broad shoulders pushed through the crowd. "We can't have brawling here, boys," he ordered curtly. "Any little difficulty can be settled later."

"It will be settled," Sam cried. "You can bet yore boots on that."

"But not here. We won't stand for that."

"That's what you say."

Sugg's hard steady gaze held fast to the man. "That's what I say."

Jim Merrill interposed. "This is a friendly dance, Sam. We didn't come here to have trouble."

"And there won't be any," Sugg added decisively. He smiled at Jake Hickory, but the smile carried a warning. "You boys have too much sense for that."

Bob had turned Willie May over to Mrs. Merrill and was standing beside Cleburn. "Just a little misunderstanding," he explained quietly. "Clear the floor and start another square."

The black beady eyes of Jake Hickory blazed into the steady blue-grey ones of the J A B cowboy. "Fellow," he threatened, "I aim to tear the hide offen you—soon."

Bob's gaze held fast. His answer was no louder than a whisper. "I'll be watiin' at the gate, I reckon," he answered.

Merrill clapped his hands for silence.

"Clear the floor, ladies and gents. Get yore partners for the next dance."

* * *

The Hickorys and their adherents from Hackberry Creek moved slowly toward the door and went outside. A few minutes later a thick-set redfaced fellow with a flaming beard, named Rush Greer, came back into the barn. He sidled up to Bob Lee and said something in a low tone.

Lee drawled: "Tell Jake he'll have to wait. I'm too busy to come and get skinned tonight."

Timmy Boggs heard him. He left the hall and found the Hickorys outside.

"Don't start anything, boys," he told them. "Go home."

"We'll go home when we're ready," Sam answered. "Can't anyone alive knock me around and get away with it."

Sugg joined the group. "Let me talk with the boys—alone," he said to Timmy.

Sugg moved with the disturbers a few paces from the barn. He argued in a low urgent voice but those listening could tell the gang were dissatisfied. Sam Hickory broke away and started for the barn.

"Don't be a fool," he insisted.

Half-heartedly, Sam struck him on the jaw. Sugg's arm lashed out and caught the desperado flush below the point of the chin. The fellow went down like a pole-axed steer.

Timmy Boggs and Bob Lee ran forward to help Sugg but at his sharp order they pulled up.

"Keep out of this," he snapped. "I'm handling it."

The Hickorys glared at him. "You can't do that to us," Ed cried.

"Use your head." Sugg answered harshly. "This has gone far enough. Fork your saddles and get out."

MANSFIELD BUSINESS IN REVIEW

NO SCARCITY OF LINOLEUM ANTICIPATED

Home Interiors Stock of Floor Covering Larger Than Last Year.

In a time of mounting priorities, it is surprising but true that the production of linoleum has not been curtailed to any negligible extent. On the contrary, Mr. Frank Bunsey of Home Interiors reports that their stock of Armstrong floor covering is more complete than it was two years ago.

A number of additional patterns in Armstrong linoleum arrived at the Main street store this week to make selections even more varied and a staff of instillation experts are available in most cases, on a few hours notice.

Hr. Bunsey, a former associate of Sterling and Welsh in Cleveland, provides for Home Interiors customers a complimentary decorating service which has proved of inestimable value to homemakers in North Central Ohio.

Bunsey makes suggestions at the request of customers concerned with period design, furniture arrangement, choice of fabric, color harmony and contrast and complete correlation of floor and wall covering, slip covers and window treatments to make an arresting and individual model of each room.

Home Interiors slip cover and drapery service is well known in this vicinity and even a large staff of expert craftsmen are kept constantly busy. The workrooms are already scheduling fall work which makes it necessary that customers make plans several weeks in advance of the time they wish their slip covers completed if they are to avoid a disappointing delay.

Fall patterns in slip cover and drapery fabrics are now filtering in at the Home Interiors showroom. Among these are several bolts of particularly durable material made under government inspection for government use, the surplus of which has been printed in attractive design for civilian use.

Also available at Home Interiors, 86 North Main, is an interesting and varied selection of rugs for colorful accent in every type room and a group of rayon marquisette curtains, hertofore not available.

Instruction In Spanish Dancing To Be Featured By Speas Studios

Marguerite Speas to Open Eighth Season on September 7.

Registration is in progress at the Marguerite Speas Studios for both private and class lessons in all types of dancing including instruction in tap, ballet, acrobatic and Spanish, as well as combinations of tap and ballet or tap and acrobatic.

Classes will begin on Tuesday, September 7, the first day after Labor day, and Miss Speas urges all parents to register the names of their children before that time so that they will have the advantage of the all-important first lessons.

The necessity of each childs beginning work with the very first classes cannot be overemphasized, Miss Speas says, since "10 o'clock scholars" are apt to be discouraged when they find themselves confused and unable to advance with those members of their class who have made step-by-step progress through the beginning classes. Enrollment will continue until the last of this month, Miss Speas states.

Important addition to the curriculum this season will be special instruction in Spanish dancing with castinets. This, Miss Speas explains, helps to teach rhythm in the fingers as well as in the feet and is one of the most dramatic types of dancing.

Miss Speas studied this phase of the dance while she was in New York this summer under Pasco Cansino, Ria Hayward's uncle and one of 11 sons to teach Spanish dancing. His 80 year old father makes castinets by hand. It is interesting to note that the only expense connected with Spanish dancing are the castinets since pupils may wear street shoes for lessons.

In addition to her study of Spanish dancing, Miss Speas continued her training this summer with Joseph Levinoff in ballet, with Louis Chalif in acrobatic and special study of methods in teaching very small children, and attended the Jack Stanley school of tap dancing. This is her eighth consecutive summer season in New York City. She considers these periods of study of inestimable value in keeping abreast of the latest dancing trends and methods of instruction.

The Speas Studio this year has been moved from the third floor of the Bird building to the apartment directly below. This includes a reception room, office and waiting rooms, class and practice rooms and Miss Speas' private office. Each has been most attractively and colorfully decorated in a manner suggesting Miss Speas' own unerring sense of good taste.

Miss Speas will begin her eighth season as director of the Marguerite Speas Dancing school this fall. She is the only native Mansfielder teaching dancing in the city.

Classes will include all age groups including the instruction of adults in evening classes. For further information concerning enrollment, phone 1616-1.

Miss Marguerite Speas, shown in the accompanying photo, will begin her eighth season Sept. 7 as director of the Speas Dancing school, located on the second floor of the Bird building, 61½ North Main.

FIRST BRETHREN SCENE OF WEDDING CEREMONY

Miss Lola Putnam Becomes Bride of Pfc. William Blair Mapes In Service Read Aug. 12 By Rev. Carrithers.

THE FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH was the scene of the wedding of Miss Lola Mescal Putnam, Petroleum, W. Va., and Pfc. William Blair Mapes, son of Mrs. Nancy Mapes, Clarksburg, W. Va. The quiet service was read Aug. 12 at 6:30 o'clock by Rev. E. R. Carrithers in the presence of the immediate families.

Miss Opal Putnam, sister of the bride, was her attendant, and F. V. Null, brother-in-law of the bride, served as best man.

For her wedding Miss Putnam chose a street length frock of white jersey with white accessories. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

In attendance for the service were Mrs. Clifford Eddy of Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. Null of Lexington, Misses Opal, Ernestine and Verdis Putnam of Akron, sisters of the bride. Six nieces and nephews of the bride were also present.

Following the service the couple left for a trip. Pfc. Mapes is now stationed at Des Moines, Ia.

ASTOWELA MEETING.

The home of Mrs. Dean Rex, Shepard road, was the scene of the meeting of the Astowela Garden club Friday. Associate hostesses were Mrs. C. V. McConnell and Mrs. Harold Balyeat. Garden flowers decorated the luncheon table. Mrs. Neil Remy furnished the program, giving a paper on "Sense of Humus" by Bertha Damon. The next meeting will be held Sept. 17 at the Women's club with Mrs. M. E. Geipel, Mrs. Charles Hughes and Miss Carolyn Walter as hostesses for a luncheon.

CASUALTIES IN SICILY 7,400

Alexander Reports American Losses In Seizure of Italian Island.

Canadian casualties totaled 2,388 for a grand total for all Allied forces of 21,623. The figures covered the period up to last Tuesday, when the campaign ended with the capture of Messina.

(An official statement issued at Allied headquarters in North Africa last Wednesday estimated Allied casualties at 25,000, but this figure presumably included air force and naval casualties while Alexander's report covered only ground forces. The headquarters statement also estimated Axis dead and wounded at not fewer than 32,000 and Axis prisoners at more than 135,000.)

Alexander said the Germans lost 30,000 of their original 300,000 troops in killed and wounded and 134,000 in prisoners.

Alexander said the Italians "just collapsed" when the Allies landed, but the Germans fought bravely and hard to the end.

"The German is a brave soldier and a good one," he said. "He fought hard. To say otherwise would be only to belittle our soldiers."

B'NAI B'RITH PRESENTS $1,200 CHECK TO RED CROSS CHAPTER

Presentation of a check for $1,200 from the B'Nai Brith congregation to the American Red Cross was made at a ceremony Friday afternoon at Central Park

The money is to be used to buy an automobile for the field director at one of the Hawaiian stations. The vehicle will be bought on the west coast and shipped to Pearl Harbor, Hickan Field, or Honolulu

A field director's car like the one to be purchased was on display during the ceremonies. It was brought to Mansfield from Camp Perry.

Herman Jacobson, chairman of war service for the men's lodge of the B'Nai Brith, presided for the ceremonies and made the presentation. In his talk, he said, "This has been our biggest project to date, but it was only the beginning."

The check was accepted by Michael Kreider, Red Cross field representative, who represented the national Red Cross headquarters. Kreider explained the work of a field director and told about the part that a car has in this work.

The American Legion Color Guard was present for the ceremonies. Guests from other civic organizations also attended.

Speakers on the program included Mayor W. J. Locke, who represented the city; Allen Bond, Richland County Red Cross chapter chairman, Rev. Grover Swoyer; James Will, representing the American Legion; and Carleton E. Ray, Red Cross field director at Camp Perry.

An inscription bearing the name of the lodge and the city will be placed on the side of the car before it is sent to the station.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

Katharine went swiftly out of my sitting room, and I heard her knock on the camouflaged communicating door between my balcony suite and the adjoining one. Dicky must have answered her summons immediately, for it was but a few seconds before he followed her back into the sitting room, and bent over my chair with a caressing pat on my shoulder.

"Welcome home from the wars!" he said.

Then he drew a chair near me and settled himself in it after Katharine had sat down at the desk near the telephone.

"I don't think Milner will telephone again," she said. "But he's unpredictable, and he seems to have something terrific on his alleged mind which he's yearning to ask you."

A Phony Story.

"Whatever story he tells when he gets here will be a phony," Dickey commented. "He's simply wild to know if Madge is really here, and has been here all the morning. We'll tell you all about it as soon as the chief gets here. But before we begin our saga, we'll ask him what's to be done about Miller."

"I'll sure be glad to have the responsibility lifted from my shoulders," Katharine said. "For the last hour or two I've been expecting him to come down here with tommy guns, snickersnees and tomahawks."

"Well, your scalp will be safe now," Dicky assured her and then we were silent until my father's signaling knock sounded on the door.

Katharine hurried to the door and admitted him. When he had greeted us, he turned to her.

"Milner has been insistent about seeing Margaret, has he not?"

"Insistent" is a feeble word she said smiling.

"I thought so," he said frowning. "I think before we proceed to anything else, we must convince him not only that she is here now, but that she has not left the room at any time this morning. Do you think that if you telephone him she has just awakened, and though still feeling ill will see him in fifteen minutes that you can fix her up in that time to look pale and suffering?"

"Indeed I can," Katharine said promptly, "and Madge's dramatic ability will enable her to act the part as well as look it. Shall I telephone him now?"

"Please!" and as Katharine walked to the telephone, she tossed instructions at me.

"Wash your face, then let down your hair, and plait it in two braids."

I obeyed at once, but left the bathroom door open that I might miss no word of what she was saying to Milner.

The Professional Touch.

"Mr. Milner?" she said, with just the right "professional nurse touch." "This is Mrs. Bickett. Mrs. Graham has just awakened, and I have given her your message."

There was a pause, and then she spoke again.

"Yes, she will see you. But I cannot permit her to talk for another quarter of an hour. She needs my professional care for a little while. If you care to come down in fifteen minutes you may see her then. Good-bye!"

She turned from the telephone with an amused little laugh.

"I thought he was going to send a kiss over the wire!" she said, adding: "Ah, Madge, — quick work!" as I came through the bathroom door, with one side of my hair plaited, and working busily at the other. "You heard what I said to Milner. I'll wager."

"Nobody's going to take your bet, Katrina" Dicky drawled. "The little gal had both ears and mouth wide open."

"But she wasn't so absorbed that she forgot to do her stuff," Katharine said approvingly. "She even got into a house coat and slippers. Lie down here, my friend, while I transform you into a painracked invalid.

"That will be small potatoes for Madge after what Halloran did to her," Dicky remarked. You ought to have seen her as a slightly decrepit chambermaid, Katrina. She was a knock-out! But I managed to get a candid camera shot of her."

"Dicky, you didn't!" I protested frantically.

But my husband gestured to my father.

"Chief's orders," he said surprisingly.

London Blitz Babies Find New Life

By DOROTHY ROE
(AP Features Writer)

MORE than 40,000 British children who lived through the London blitz have a lesson to teach to America.

On the anniversary of the all-out bombardment of London, which began Aug. 8, 1940, most of these children are still happily esconced in nurseries and foster homes throughout the British countryside, have taken the terrors of total war in stride, and will return to their homes after the war in most cases as normal, happy and well-adjusted as they were before.

Credit for this seemingly miraculous salvation of children who might be expected to bear the scars and shock throughout their lives, goes to the 1,200 wartime nurseries of Britain, where nurses, teachers, doctors and psychologists have worked together to erase the horrors of war from childish minds.

Among the most successful of the group are the three Hampstead nurseries operated under the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children, by Anna Freud, daughter of the late Sigmund Freud, and Dorothy Tiffany Burlingham, American psychologist.

From 20,000 case histories of children under their care, the two women have written a book, "War and Children," which presents some significant findings from which American parents and teachers can learn much.

The greatest shock to children in wartime, say the authors, comes not from the actual horrors of air raids and the sight of death and suffering, but from the breaking up of normal family life.

Children forget easily and quickly the catastrophes they have seen, but it is a more serious matter for them to readjust their lives to unfamiliar surroundings, away from their mothers and fathers.

Much of the success of the Foster Parents' Plan has resulted from the practice of encouraging frequent and regular vists from the mothers of evacuated children, say the Misses Freud and Burlingham, and in creating small substitute "family groups" within the nurseries, with one teacher serving as substitute mother to not more than four children.

ORPHANS OF WAR: Almost three years ago these youngsters were orphaned by bombs and driven into the scarred streets of London. Today, under care of the Hampstead nurseries, they have found security and care.

FOSTER CHILD: Here is an example of the result of the care of the Foster Parents Plan in England.

GAMES HELP in rehabilitating youthful war victims, British nurseries have found.

WORK AND PLAY are wisely combined in activities of many of the evacuated youngsters. Here boys at one of the colonies operated in a rural section are gathering and bottling honey.

Coleman Home Scene of Party

Mrs. Joseph Marfia, nee Phyllis Mace, was feted last evening at a post-nuptial party given by Mrs. Dick Coleman and Miss Ann Louise Parsons, at their home, North Mulberry street. Ten guests were present and surprised Mrs. Marfia with a shower of miscellaneous gifts.

Cards were in play with prizes won by Mrs. Fred Birmelin and Mrs. Marfia. Later refreshments were served at small tables decorated with pink and white. The hostess gave her a gift of crystal.

Mrs. Margery Jordan and Danny Cherwinski were the hosts. Prizes for games were won by Marie Weingartner, Marsha Simpson, Paul Leitenberger and Socrates Delianides.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

JUST THINK A MOMENT

It takes just a moment of thinking to decide some of the simple but vital problems which come up during the play of an ordinary hand. In many cases, that thinking should carry you back to the bidding, which can often guide you almost infallibly. That is the case time after time in deciding what card to play on the first lead toward a king-jack combination. If the bidding indicates that the ace is in the hand which plays after you do, then the J is nearly always the best chance. But if it is fairly well marked as being in the hand which plays first, then the king is a better play.

(Dealer North North-South vulnerable)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♦	1 ♠
2 ♥	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	4 ♦	Pass
5 ♦

South is of course licked if he immediately tries to clear trumps after winning the spade K lead, as the defenders then will be bound to score two spades and a trump. So South ran four hearts, discarding two spades as West trumped the last one with the diamond 6. The spade 10 was returned for a ruff by South, who then went to dummy with the club A in order to lead diamonds toward his own holding.

After East put the diamond 10 on the 2, South, almost without any hesitation, played the K, and the A won it. Later the diamond Q scored the setting trick.

"What on earth caused you to play the K on that diamond lead?" asked North.

"Well, I knew where 10 trumps were, and there were only three out," answered South, who said he had been taught that, when there were three missing trumps including the A and Q, the K was the best play on the first lead, after one opponent had followed with a lower card.

"To begin with, that is just the reverse of right, as the J is the best play when you have no guidance," commented North. "But more important, West almost surely had the A, since he had made a bid, whereas East might very well hold the Q." Of course, the J play would have made this contract.

Your Week-End Lesson.

Are you familiar with the provisions in the new Laws of Contract Bridge on these matters:

1. In drawing cards for partners and seats, what irregularities oblige a player to draw again?
2. What players are permitted to shuffle the cards?
3. How many cards must there be in each portion when the cards are cut?
4. Who should complete the cut, the dealer or the cutter?
5. When may a player demand a new cut or a new shuffle?
6. After such a demand, for a new shuffle, who should shuffle?

Keep Vegetables In Cool Place

Take care of vegetables when they come home from the market. Keep them cool and use them as soon as possible to preserve their vitamin content. Vary ways of cooking them, too, as I have urged before.

Today's Menu.

Liver and Onions
Boiled Potatoes
Braised Carrots Sliced Tomatoes
Apple Sauce Cake
Tea or Coffee

Braised Carrots

2 bunches carrots
2 Tbsps minced onion
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 Tbsp. bacon
1 Tbsp. bacon fat or salad oil

Scrub and scrape carrots and slice lengthwise; arrange in a greased shallow baking dish and sprinkle with minced onion, salt, pepper, fat or oil. Cover and bake 20 minutes in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F). Remove cover, increase heat to 450 degrees F., and continue baking until carrots are brown. Serves 6.

Apple Sauce Cake.

1½ cup strained, unsweetened applesauce
1 cup light brown sugar
½ cup melted margarine
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 cup chopped raisins
½ tsp nutmeg
2 tsps. soda in a little cold water
2 cups flour

Combine melted margarine and sugar, add apple sauce. Sift flour with other dry ingredients and add some to raisins. Add dissolved soda to margarine and sugar, then add flour and spices a little at a time, and last add raisins. Bake in a loaf pan at 350 degrees F., about one-half hour.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Aug. 22.

Sunday's horoscope holds good encouragement for all spiritual, mystical, and idealistic activities and aspirations, but more material objectives may not enjoy desired progress. This could be due too only to erratic, peculiar or impulsive conduct, but those in influence and authority may withhold their support.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year in which the outcome depends upon individual integrity, cleverness and self-control. With restraint of erratic, crafty and curious outbursts, offensive to superiors and those who might give solid support, there might be excellent results.

For Monday, Aug. 23.

Monday's astrological forecast shows a sudden and exciting burst of enterprise and initiative by the unexpected turn of events, promising progress and rich adventure. Impulses and ambitions may be spurred to high tension by a surprising advent of opportunity, which may involve radical change and new environs.

Those whose birthday it is are encouraged to grasp with ardor, enthusiasm, enterprise and ingenuity a sudden opportunity, promising adventure, romance, expansive financial and credit stability, with many private as well as public acts of approval and appreciation.

ART STUDY CLUB HOLDS ANNUAL PICNIC FRIDAY

New Officers Assume Duties at Meeting at North Lake Park When Year's Programs Are Distributed and Discussed.

ART STUDY CLUB members held their annual summer picnic Friday at the North Lake park pavilion with 21 members and one guest, Mrs. C. J. Ingram, in attendance. Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Boyd Wierman, Mrs. Marion Brinkerhoff, Mrs. Richard Fensch and Mrs. David Talbot, members of last season's program committee. Mrs. William Keefe, the retiring president, conducted the brief business session.

New officers for the coming year assumed their duties yesterday. They are Mrs. Fensch, president; Mrs. K. E. Buhr, vice president; Mrs. M. M. Collins, secretary; and Mrs. C. K. Smaltz, treasurer. The program committee is composed of Mrs. Buhr, Mrs. Clay Lutz and Miss Henrietta Frank.

Programs for the fall and winter season were distributed and discussed. The first meeting will be held at the Public library on Oct. 8. Garden flowers decorated the long tables when luncheon was served at noon.

Britain Refuses To Recognize Proxy Weddings

Great Britain refuses to recognize proxy marriages.

British women members of parliament made a stand for the legality of proxy marriages, reasoning that a wedding ring would be a comfort to the lovers separated by oceans, but without success.

Often in Great Britain, as over here, soldiers and their sweethearts who fully expect to be married, are prevented at the last moment by the withholding of a promised furlough, or again by legal restrictions demanding several days between the intention to wed and the performance of the ceremony.

With their finer intuitions, women members of parliament recognized such things, but fellow-members of the masculine persuasion pooh-poohed the idea. Although he is considered a liberal with advanced views, Herbert Morrison, minister of home security, declared in the house of commons that numerous obstacles that made recognition inadvisable.

The question was raised there as a result of the proxy marriage of Joan Churchman, of London, to George Kallins of Chicago, now at officers' training camp, in Miami, Florida. The American embassy takes the view that the marriage is legal, because the state of Florida recognizes proxy marriages But with the minister of home security contending no change has been made in Miss Churchman's status by the proxy ceremony, she requires a British passport and exit visa to join Kallins in this country. British authorities do not recognize the validity of a U. S. passport for her.

And the British passport bureau has said it won't issue a passport or an exit visa for her.

Undoubtedly the question of proxy marriages will come up again for discussion in parliament, since many Laborites and nearly all women members have urged that such marriages be legalized. Meanwhile, Yanks had best avoid proxy marriages with British subjects.

ENTERTAINS CLUB.

Mrs. Robert Phipps, Hedges street, was hostess to 15 members of the Floral Hedge club Thursday evening at her home. Bunco was in play with score gifts won by Mrs. C. C. Herrick and Mrs. Earl Herrick. Luncheon was served later at small tables with appointments in green and white. The business session was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Simpson. The next meeting is scheduled for Sept. 16 at the home Mrs. Mrs. Mary Hill, Hedges street.

PINOCHLE CLUB.

Mrs. B. C. Mawhorr, South Diamond street, entertained members of the Jolly Nine Pinochle club Thursday evening at her home. Mrs. Jacob Berlo was a guest in attendance. Two tables were in play with prizes won by Mrs. Jack Brandt and Mrs. William Frontz. Later lunch was served at small tables. The next meeting will take place Sept. 2 at the Brandt home, State street.

Rose Palumbo Honored at Sorority Party

Miss Rose Palumbo, who is leaving Mansfield soon to make her home in Los Angeles, Calif., with her parents, was honored Thursday evening at a party given at the home of Miss Evelyn Swetlick, 536 North Mulberry street. Members of the Alpha Nu Omega sorority were present and presented Miss Palumbo with a farewell gift.

A short busines session of the sorority was held after which a social time was enjoyed. Club prize was won by Miss Palumbo. Later an informal luncheon was served at a round table centered with appointments in pink and blue and a bouquet of mixed flowers.

The sorority will meet Aug. 26 for a dinner and theater party. On Aug. 31 there will be a skating party. The next regular session will be held Sept. 16 at the home of Miss Angeline Spitalieri, 187 Blymyer avenue.

Complexion Must Be Reconditioned Says Authority

In the springtime there is the problem of the complexion that has been subjected to wintry winds. All rough and reddy. Maybe there is grayness due to lack of exercise. At any rate, between seasons call for a special overhauling and coddling of the facial coat.

During the silly season there is a question: shall one flirt with Mister Sun, let him lay on freckles if he wants to, or shall one go in for a policy of protection and be a hot house plant? Outdoor life is vitalizing. Young and old should bask in sunlight.

Now then, how looks the feminine portrait that belongs to you? Is it or is it not getting through the summer with no casualties in the way of sun spots or streaky tan? It looks as if a little help won't do faces a bit of harm.

It isn't too early to start the autumn campaign against the ravages of summer. When the time comes to take down the screens, go stalking a winter coat, get the kids ready for school, the beauty shops will be come a scene of activity. For facial treatments it is the rushingest season of the year. Madame Pulchritude, the boss of the beautery, believes that complexions are poor neglected orphans during the grand old summer times. She claims they don't get a bit of attention. Well, you fool her. Start right now to put your face in form.

Facials are well worth the money, and the professional touch does things. It stirs up the blood streams, eliminates dead skin scales, gives the fibers a work out. But home care is what keeps the beauty wheels going round.

If freckles are your pet peeve, sponge the skin surface with a lotion made of equal parts of strained lemon juice and peroxide. The peroxide must be fresh, so open a new bottle. If tan has gone piebald, some parts light, some dark, this same bleaching medium will prove helpful. Also, peroxide has a softening effect on pore plugs, in case incipient blackheads are present.

Use cream faithfully, but not lavishly. A little, well frictioned into the flesh, does more good than a thick layer without brisk manipulations.

Paul Carbetta is kinda glad he's going to the army next Friday.

"If I don't go pretty soon," says Paul, "those guys up at Akron will have me punchy. Always calling up a day or two before a fight and telling me to get up there without a bit of warning. Never a chance to train. They'd be getting my block knocked off if I stuck around here much longer.

"Like Wednesday night. They call up and tell me I'm fighting this Jackie Evans out of Pittsburgh for six rounds on Thursday. They knew it all the time. Already had my name on the printed programs. But it's a secret to me.

"Sure, I'm healthy enough. In pretty good shape for the everyday going. But you gotta train for a fight. If I had known I was booked, I'd have been up at the Y every day working out, and doing road work and all that stuff.

"So I tell 'em I ain't gonna fight, and what are they trying to do anyhow, get me killed? I ain't in no shape to fight, not six rounds anyhow.

"But they tell me I gotta, cause they can't get anybody else at this late date, and besides substitutions don't look good. So I tell 'em all right, but don't expect too much.

"So I take it easy in the first round, feelin' the guy out, and tryin' to clock myself for the six heats, but this Evans won't have any of that easy stuff, and he keeps rushing me around and finally he conks me one and I have to slow him down. I give him a left hook in the belly and we get along nice for the rest of the round.

"In the second I get in a dandy left to the middle and down he goes for a long count—and I mean a long count. He's just climbin' up on his hands and knees at nine, and the referee quits countin'. And he takes his time gettin' up from there. But he's down again for five at the bell.

"You'd think he'd be ready to slow down by now, but he gets rough with me in the third, throwin' me around against the ropes, and I don't like this at all.

"So I give him a left hook in the basket and a right cross to the chin and call it a night.

"They can't be expectin' me to go six rounds on one night's notice."

Plastic surgery on a duck. A mallard duck in Park Lake at Peekskill, New York, was observed by park superintendent to be in distress. Duck was captured, examined, and found to have upper bill missing, perhaps amputated by a snapping turtle. A local dentist molded a new bill from pink plastic, fitted it on, and the duck is now feeding. Park authorities are wondering if the duck will get cross-eyed, looking at its new pink bill.

You old timers know this, so this tip is for the beginner. When a bass seizes your line or plug, set the hook with two or three determined jerks. Don't try to bring him straight to the boat, but when you have him within six or eight feet from the boat, start leading him back and forth in a figure 8. This keeps him from breaking water, and tires him out in short order.

Indians Drop to 4th Place

Yanks Take Slugfest By Bunching Blows.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— The Cleveland Indians were back in the less rarafied atmosphere of fourth place today after their second straight defeat by the New York Yankees.

The McCarthymen collected 14 hits—only two more than the Tribesmen—in notching a 10 to 5 triumph, but their blows were longer and more timely.

Only five of the Redskins' smashes figured in runs while the Yankees utilized all but one of their drives in producing their tallies. The Indians left 12 runners stranded, raising their total for the series to 57.

Vernon Kennedy, Ray Poat, Al Milnar, Pete Center and Chubby Dean labored on the mound for the Indians. Atley Donald made his first start for the Bronx Bombers since July 25 and pitched shutout ball for the first five innings.

A double by Buddy Rosar and singles by Mickey Rocco, Ray Mack and Russ Peters gave the Tribe a pair of runs in the sixth. Roy Cullenbine reached first on Nick Etten's double to start the seventh and Jeff Heath's 12th homer of the season reduced the Yanks' lead to 7 to 4. The blow finished Donald and brought in Johnny Murphy.

The Yanks widened the gap again with three runs in the eighth on Frank Crosetti's single, Charley Keltner's walk and two baggers by Bill Dickey and Etten. Murphy throttled the Tribe until the ninth when a single by Cullenbine, a walk to Heath and a bingle by Rosar accounted for the last marker.

* * *

The loss failed to halt the batting streaks of Lou Boudreau and Russ Peters. The Tribe's manager has hit safely in 14 games while Peters has connected in 10 contests.

Jim Bagby tries to prevent the Yanks from capturing their 11th consecutive series today. His opponent is Hank Borowy.

STARTED WRONG

BOSTON —(AP)— Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds is convinced that if he had put Bert Haas in centerfield at the season's outset, his team would be within overhauling distance of the first-place St. Louis Cardinals.

Today the Reds are 11 games behind the world champs and from here it looks like a "breezein" for the Cards to repeat.

Haas opened the season at third where he booted the ball around while the Reds were in the field more than he did at the plate. Later he was sent to first to fill in for Frank McCormick and his performance was just passable. But when the Reds moved him east three weeks ago McKechnie moved him to center.

In addition to clouting the ball for a healthy percentage and for extra bases, Bert has been hitting in the clutches and fielding his position with a lot of hustle.

Whitey Wietelmann's double off the centerfield fence with two out and two mates on base in the 12th inning yesterday, sent Johnny Vander Meer and the Reds crashing to a 3 to 2 defeat at the hands of the Boston Braves.

Going into the seventh, Vandy was in rare form, sporting a two-run lead and had allowed but one hit. At the plate, the double no-hit pitcher laid down a bunt and beat it out, but in crossing first base his spike caught and he fell. After the Reds were retired and before Johnny could recover his equilibrium, the Braves tied the score with two runs.

Just who was to pitch for the Reds today in the fifth and last game of the Boston series, was a problem for McKechnie. He said his choice was narrowed down to Bucky Walters, El Heusser or Joe Beggs. Nate Andrews will pitch for Boston.

All-Star Baseball Teams May Tour Mediterranean

By JACK CUDDY

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Two all-star major baseball teams may be sent to the Mediterranean theater of war after the World series to play for service men, it was learned authoritatively today.

A detailed proposal for such an expedition, sanctioned by major league executives, was sent to the war department some time ago. One of the executives, who refused to be quoted, said: "I understand the proposal is receiving favorable consideration in Washington."

Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, when checked by telephone at Chicago, declined to confirm or deny the plan. He said: "I have no comment to make at this time."

It was learned that Branch Rickey, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, submitted the proposal to Washington. Today Rickey said only, "I have no official information on it. I have no other comment."

Bill Stern, NBC sports announcer, reported in a broadcast that Rickey had received a favorable response. He added that army officials in Washington had cabled Gen. Dwight D. Eiserhower, Allied commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean theater, and had received the following reply:

"I not only want those teams, but I insist that they stay over here for 30 days."

There is a possibility that Babe Ruth, retired all-time home run king, may be invited to accompany the teams.

Westies Lose District Title

Drop 6-3 Decision to Lorain Carek Meats.

Mansfield Westinghouse softballers lost the district championship last night, being edged in the tournament finals at Oberlin by the Lorain Carek Meats 6-3.

Stub Winebrenner, hurling his third game in as many nights, still had enough stuff left to keep the Careks from making a runaway of it, scattering 12 hits so that the new champs tallied more than one run in only the first inning.

Lorain was ahead all the way scoring two runs in the first and one in the second before Westies came back with two in their half of the second.

Greenberg Upsets Francisco Segura

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I.—(U.P.)—Veteran Sydney Wood, ex-Davis cup tennis player, today was scheduled to meet the winner of the second group—now in a three way tie among Seymour Greenberg, Chicago; Francisco Segura, Ecuador, and Bob Falkenberg, Hollywood—in the championship match of the Meadow club invitation tournament.

* * *

Yesterday's play produced the most startling upset of the tournament and of the year when Greenberg, national clay courts champion, handed Segura his first defeat of 1943, 6-4, 0-6, 6-4, with expert handling of the South American's feared volleys.

* * *

In another upset, Wood, home club veteran, defeated Lt. Joe Hunt, Annapolis, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, and then took the sudden death set of the round robin tourney, played to determine the winner of the group, 6-4.

In the women's division, Pauline Betz, national champion, Los Angeles, defeated Margaret Osborne, 6-4, 6-1, and Miss Louise Brough, Beverly Hills, Cal., defeated Mrs. Joe Hunt, 6-2, 6-3.

Sgt. Jim Turnesa Sets Pace

Fires 67 In Opening Round of Tournament.

By TOMMY DEVINE

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Staff Sgt. Jim Tunesa of Staten Island, N. Y., paced a class-crowded field in the Victory National Open golf tournament today and he credited his position to the fatherly advice of a battle-tested army captain.

Sgt. Jim, the next to youngest member of golf's most illustrious family, fired a 67 in the opening round of the tournament yesterday to lead a field of 41 invited stars.

"Just before I was given a furlough in May of 1942 to play in the P. G. A. championship at Seaview, my captain at Fort Dix, N. J., took me aside and gave me a heart-to-heart talk about determination," Turnesa said.

"Now I know what it means to battle and I feel like doing it here."

Turnesa had a one under par 35 going out yesterday. He had a birdie on the first hole, and then matched regulation figures to the turn. On the back nine the 30-year-old soldier hit a "hot" streak and romped home in 32. He had eight one-putt greens on the homeward journey, carding four birdies.

A stroke back of Turnesa were Byron Nelson, the pre-tournament favorite from Toledo, O., and Sammy Byrd of Philadelphia, the former New York Yankee outfielder.

Nelson had consistent nines of 34-34 for his aggregate, while Byrd had 33-35.

Craig Wood of Mamoroneck, N. Y., the 1941 National Open titlist, "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, the Minneapolis veteran and Jimmy Demaret, the carefree Detroiter, were next with 69s.

Another army sergeant, amateur Jim McHale of Baltimore, Md., and Willie Goggin, the White Plains, N. Y., veteran were next with 70s.

Four stars were bracketed with even par rounds of 71. They were Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles, Calif.; Ky Laffoon of Tulsa, Okla.; Mike Turnesa, White Plains, N. Y., and Melvin (Chick) Harbert, youthful Battle Creek, Mich., performer now in the army at Camp Grant, Ill.

The field will play another 18 holes today, with the final 36 holes scheduled for tomorrow.

Red Bird Fielder Climbs In Race

CHICAGO — (AP) — Augie Bergamo, the Columbus Red Birds' outfielder, jumped back into third place in the American Association batting race this week, just 10 points behind leading Grey Clarke of Milwaukee and seven behind the No. 2 man, Chet Wieczorek, Bergamo's teammate.

* * *

Bergamo raised his average from .315 to .323 by getting 13 hits in 31 times at bat in the seven day period which includes games up to Thursday night. Clarke skidded 16 points to .333 while Wieczorek boosted his mark six points to .330.

* * *

Specialty leaders were: Hits, Tony York and Clarke, Milwaukee, 138 each; doubles, Bergamo, 26; triples, Steve Barath, Louisville, 11; home runs, Ted Norbert, Milwaukee, 15; runs batted in, Norbert, 80; stolen bases, Russ Rolandson, Minneapolis, 14.

Best pitching records were by Jim Trexler of Minneapolis, 15 wins and 6 losses, and Preacher Roe of Columbus, 11 and 5.

Springfield Drops First Series Tilt

CHARLOTTE, N. C.—(AP)—With the first game in the bag, the Birmingham, Ala., Juniors will be out to make it two in a row over Springfield, O., tonight and cop the sectional American Legion baseball tournament.

* * *

Birmingham, winner of the seventh regional title, took the initial game in the two-out-of-three series last night, 4-3. Although outhit, they took advantage of four Springfield errors in the second inning and scored three runs.

* * *

The Ohioans, who triumphed in the region six tournament, rallied in the ninth, but Birmingham put in Burton to relieve Rorie, and he fanned the last two Springfield batters.

Should Springfield win tonight and tie the series, a third game will be played immediately afterward.

The sectional champion will play in the national tournament which will start either in San Francisco or Minneapolis Aug. 28.

Brews Blast Toledo Hens

Red Norbert Hits 16th And 17th Home Runs.

(By Associated Press)

Those irrepressible Milwaukee Brewers celebrated the departure of the second-place Columbus Red Birds last night by blasting the latest visitor to Borchert field—Toledo—in merry fashion.

The party included two home runs by Red Norbert, his 16th and 17th of the season, hit in consecutive times at bat in the first and third innings. Don Johnson joined the fun in the seventh with a homer with the bases filled, and when it was all over the Brewers had won, 10 to 2, and added another half game to their American Association lead.

The Red Birds, who departed from Milwaukee just two games out of first, divided a doubleheader with Kansas City. Columbus won the short opener, 2 to 0, behin Preacher Joe's three-hit pitching, but lost the second, 5 to 1, as Mel Queen of the Blues turned in a four-hit effort.

The third-place Indianapolis Indians pulled up within a game and a half of Columbus by stopping Minneapolis 6 to 2.

Ford Garrison and Steve Barath hit for the circuit for Louisville as the Colonels toppled St. Paul, 5 to 2.

Cooper Handed Relief

Cards Indicate Mort Is Not Invincible.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

WITH the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Yankees leaving so little to be said about the major league pennant races, baseball men already are turning to discussing the world series and wondering where Mort Cooper will fit into Billy Southworth's strategy.

* * *

The ace of the world champions has failed four times against American league hitters—twice in the all-star games and twice in last year's world series.

The skipper of the Redbirds indicated last night that maybe he, too had decided Cooper is not invincible.

The big righthander worked for the Cardinals against the Phillies and pitched five-hit ball that took him into the ninth inning leading 5-1. But when the Phillies loaded the bases against him with one out, Southworth quickly called in Howie Krist to relieve Cooper. Krist made the next two batters pop up and saved Cooper's 17th victory.

The Yankees, who have not yet been able to draw as far ahead of the American league as the Cardinals have done in the senior circuit, looked like pennant winners in conquering the Cleveland Indians 10-5 with a 14-hit attack.

The Washington Senators, however, trounced the Chicago White Sox by the same score, 10-5, in a night game to maintain their distance behind the Yanks.

In the only other American league game Detroit nosed out the Boston Red Sox 1-0 on a single by Rudy York in the ninth inning. Both Frank (Stubby) Overmire and Joe Dobson pitched five-hit ball.

Truett (Rip) Sewell, who has become famous for his "parachute pitch," tumbled to defeat as the Pittsburgh Pirates dropped two games to the New York Giants 3-2 and 7-4. Sewell's setback resulted from Mel Ott's 17th home run with one on in the sixth inning and made his record 18 victories and five defeats to date.

The second-place Cincinnati Reds were edged 3-2 in 12 innings at Boston when Whitey Quietelmann singled home a run to end a pitching battle between Al Javery and Johnny Vander Meer.

SEEKS REVENGE IN BEVERLY HANDICAP

CHICAGO —(INS)— Mar-Kell, the four-year-old pride of Calumet farm, went hunting for revenge today in the $10,000 added Beverly handicap at Washington Park.

The mile and an eighth gallop gives Mar-Kell a chance to square accounts with two rivals which beat her previously this season—Hal Price Headley's Askmenow and Ruth Sidell's Burgoo Maid.

Five other fillies and mares are entered in today's race.

STOCK MARKET DECLINES ON EARLY TRADES

Latin-American Imports Top Exports by Large Margin In First Half Year.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks generally added fractional declines to Friday's setback in today's early market proceedings.

On the offside at a quiet opening were Bethlehem, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Chesapeake & Ohio, Dome Mines, Standard Oil (NJ), Western Union and International Telephone. Homestake Mining was an exception with a modest advance.

Those watching foreign trade for trend clues noted the summary of the department of commerce disclosing United States merchandise imports from Latin-American republics during the first half of 1943 topped exports by $209,000,000 and were 28 per cent greater than in the like period last year.

CHICAGO — (AP) — Possibility that the war food administration might re-instate its promise to pay farmers who market corn now the difference between present prices and any advance in ceilings before Oct. 31 weakened grains at the opening today.

Traders felt the WFA might take such action to increase corn marketings, which have again dried up. Wheat opened unchanged to ⅜ lower, September $1.43⅞. December $1.45⅞-¾, and rye was unchanged to ¾ lower, September 98.

THEATERS

Dixie Opens.

The jitterbugs of today will have a chance to see and hear what young America was dancing to and singing a hundred years ago, when Bing Crosby's new musical "Dixie," comes to the Ohio today to begin a one-week engagement. The movie tells the story of the formation of the Virginia minstrels with Crosby playing the part of Dan Emmett, the man who wrote the song "Dixie" and who was largely responsible for the minstrel shows of those times. Dorothy Lamour is co-starred with Crosby who sings such old timers as "Dixie" "Old Dan Tucker," "Turkey in the Straw," "Buffalo Gals," "Last Rose of Summer" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

Bombardier.

Bringing to the screen the tale of how thousands of young Americans are trained to "drop eggs" from flying fortresses, "Bombardier," co-starring Pat O'Brien and Randolph Scott, comes to the Madison tomorrow. The story begins in Washington, with O'Brien as an experienced flier whose enthusiasm for the then unheard-of Norden bomb sight makes him its ardent advocate. A large-scale bombing raid over Japanese war plants near Tokyo forms the climax of the picture. Claire Trevor and Edgar Buchanan co-star in "Good Luck Mr Yates," Madison co-attraction.

Western Trio.

One of the screen's most popular cowboy trios, Ray Corrigan, Dennis Moore and Max Terhune, is currently seen at the Park as the featured players in "Black Market Rustlers," drama of a lawless "racket" on the western frontier. Corrigan, Moore and Terhune attempt to track down a band of renegades engaged in cattle rustling. Movie fans who have heard Lum and Abner on the radio have a chance to see them in a motion picture, "Two Weeks to Live," co-attraction.

Random Harvest.

Amnesia or loss of memory, forms the basis of M G M's filmization of James Hilton's novel, "Random Harvest," starring Ronald Coleman and Greer Garson. The picture starts tomorrow at the Ritz. Coleman plays a man who, after a war injury cannot remember his past or identity. Miss Garson plays the woman whose love and faith inspire him to start life anew and aid him in recovering the past. The action is laid in England. Ritz co-feature is "Bordertown Gunfighters."

TOKYO RAIDER MISSING

HOQUIAM, Wash. (AP)—Lieut. Col. Charles Ross Greening, pilot of one of the planes raiding Tokyo last year, has been missing in action since July 17 when he participated in a mission over Italy the war department has informed his wife.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Children's books being released Saturday at the Mansfield Public Library need only brief descriptions. Both are sure to find eager readers at once among the older boys and girls.

TROUBLE AT TAMARACK, by David Lavender—Bram Tyler was determined to equal his brother's record for leadership and horsemanship at Camp Tamarack. There were many bitter lessons to learn along the way before he earned the place he sought among the other campers. His sleuthing for the rustler who was stealing the trained colts was the greatest help in breaking the feud with his rival.

GLORY BE! by Janet Lambert—Many girls will be both glad and sorry to read this book. Any friend of the Parrishes of STAR-SPANGLED SUMMER will be glad to read of them again in their experiences during wartime. Many of their admirers, however, will be sorry to finish the last of the trilogy of books about this interesting family in military life.

LIFE IN 1896 THEME OF BOOK ON NEW LIST

'Centennial Summer' By Idell To Be Released Saturday at City Library.

"Centennial Summer" by Albert E. Idell will be placed on the shelves of the Mansfield Public library today.

The book introduces the amazing Rogers family—Father Rogers, as lusty, a bearded giant of a man, a lovely and loving wife ever wrapped around her finger—and their lively brood, from Teresina (whose beauty was equalled only by her temper) to "retiring" Julia and the Twins.

Into the maelstrom swoop rich, Parisian Aunt Zena and her nephew Phillippe whose way with women is soon to be severely tested by the American way of Teresina and Julia. "Centennial Summer" gives the reader a generous, intimate slice of American living in the jubilee year of 1876.

THE THARRUS THREE by Constance Macdonald MacLean, author of "Seven for Cordelia" is a heart-warming story of human kindness in a world at war. Nothing could give a more touching picture of changing ways of life than this tender story of three children evacuated from the slums of Edinburg and Glasgow to Tharrus, a wooded farm on the Scottish Highlands. They are the Tharrus Three, and the book concerns their adventures, tragedies, and triumphs during a year which brings many changes.

DOUBLE, DOUBLE TOIL AND TROUBLE by Lion Feuchtwanger is the dramatic story of one of the strangest, most sinister figures to have appeared in the pages of modern history. Behind the scenes of decadent post-war Berlin, the author unveils the curious, warped influence of a scheming and ambitious clairvoyant upon the German Junkers and the early Nazis—of how he affected the course of history—and the mind and methods of the man whom he helped to dominate Europe.

OTHER FICTION. THE FIRESIDE BOOK OF DOG STORIES, ed by Goodman. HAVING WONDERFUL CRIME — Rice; THE FAMILY FAILING—Bower.

Gordon S. Seagrave, author of BURMA SURGEON, built, in the wilds of Burma, his own hospital, operated it with broken-down, cast-off surgical instruments, trained a corps of native nurses who spoke a dozen dialects, joined Stilwell's army when the Japs invaded Burma and did heroic battlefield surgery, and now records a life-time of experience in this exciting amazing, and touching story of American pioneering on a new frontier.

SHORT-CUT TO TOKYO. THE BATTLE FOR THE ALEUTIANS by Corey Ford is the first complete account of the Japanese attack on Dutch Harbor, based on the official records—and the only book entirely about the Aleutians so far published. Along with the story of the first invasion of American soil—in more than a hundred years—there is a personal and intimate picture of the Army and Navy flyers, and the geography and the history of our least known and loneliest front.

I WAS ON CORREGIDOR by Amea Willoughby is made up of the experiences of an American officials wife in the war-torn Philippines. The wife of the assistant to the high commissioner to the Philippines was a civilian, but with official standing, and she was evacuated at the time the MacArthur and Quezon families left, making the long trip to Australia by submarine. Preceding that were the bombing of Manila and the weeks in the tunnels of Corregidor.

TORPEDO 8 by Ira Wolfert author of "Battle For the Solomons," is the story of Swede Larsen 's Bomber Squadron, and "of how these deadly young Americans exacted a vengeance greater than any fiction writer would dare imagine. Its slogan was "Attack and Vengeance" and in three months and one week, they carried out thirty-nine attack missions. They were credited with two carriers. They also hit a destroyer, five heavy cruisers, four light cruisers, one destroyer, and one transport. Torpedo 8's revenge is a legend of the kind that made epic ballads in ancient days. And this is the story of the men who lived that legend."

OTHER NON-FICTION: RAILROADING FROM THE HEAD END — Farrington. PROLOGUE TO NEW ENGLAND — Howe. THE WACS — Shea. PREFACE TO PEACE: A SYMPOSIUM. WILDLIFE REFUGES — Gabrielson; AMERICAN WORDS AND WAYS. Especially for German Americans — Whyte; DYNAMO — Flanagan; MODERNISTIC CHIP CARVING — Mankin; BUILDING INSULATION — Close; FUNDAMENTALS OF SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY—Bogardus.

Hull Arrives In Quebec

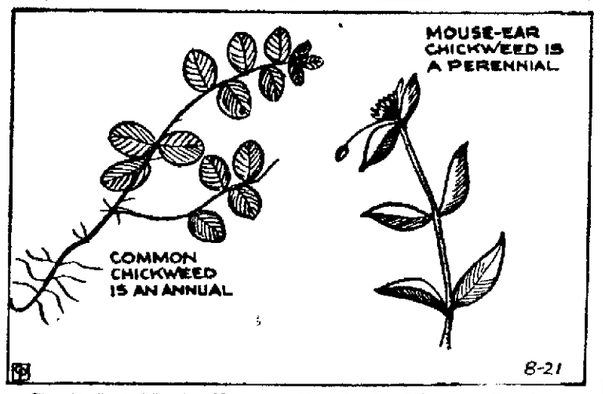
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Don't Let Up in War on Weeds in Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Ass'n.

This year's Victory gardens are apt to flourish with weeds from early spring until frost time, since newly turned land is likely to be permeated with weed seeds.

The weed problem is more of a problem among the small and slow-growing crops. Unless the weeds are kept under control from the very beginning they may crowd or smother out such plants as carrots, beets, parsley, parsnips, kohlrabi and onion seed. Plants such as tomatoes peppers and cabbage as well as other large and quick-growing vegetables, and crops such as corn and beans, are easier to keep weeded, for these crops can be readily distinguished early from the weeds, thus the latter can be kept under control from the very start.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph common chickweed is an annual while mouse-ear chickweed is a perennial. Both are pests in the Victory vegetable garden, particularly in moist locations.

Chickweed also flourishes where the soil is alkaline. It begins to grow as soon as the frost is out of the ground quickly comes into bloom and spreads rapidly.

One method of control is to dust the plants with ammonium sulphate when they are wet with dew. Another way to discourage chickweed is to spray the weed with iron sulphate, using one pound of the crystals in one and one-half gallons of water.

Special Concert—A special concert will be presented by the Smart's accordion band Sunday at North Lake park at 8 p. m.

Dogs Attack Children — Two Mansfield boys were bitten yesterday by dogs near their homes, their parents reported to police. David Marks, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Marks, 205 Helen avenue, suffered a wound on his left thigh and Jimmie Terman, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Terman, rear of 164 Blanche street, received a leg injury when a dog bit him while the child was playing at a Sturges avenue address. Owners of both dogs were ordered by police to keep the animals tied for 10 days.

Fire Damages House—The home of John McLaughlin, Oak street road, was damaged Friday afternoon by a fire of undetermined origin. City firemen said most of the damage was in the kitchen.

Imposes $10 Fine — Municipal Judge H. H. Schettler today fined George D. Philpott of Cuyahoga Falls $10 and costs on a charge of suspicion. Philpott was arrested by police Thursday night after he tried to pay for his meal at a Mansfield restaurant by check and was unable to produce identification. Officers said he tried to pass checks at a number of other business places in the city.

MORE TROUBLE FOR JAPANESE

FDR, Churchill Reported Laying Plans For Autumn Drive On Burma, Attack on Fleet.

the Japanese in the very near future.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, British permanent under-secretary of foreign affairs, was one of the key figures in the Pacific planning here. He came over with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and is one of the ranking Far Eastern experts of the British empire.

The strongest Pacific indication today was the widely circulated but unconfirmed report that Maj. General Joseph E. Stilwell, commander of Allied forces in China, had joined the discussions.

If the reports about Stilwell are true, they mean one thing: The plans for Burma have been given a final touch and a new pattern of Allied combat against the Japanese is being born.

Meantime from the citadel there came no information but many indications. Among highly unofficial reports were:

1—The Allies move against Germany by autumn, this operation timed with a body blow against the Japanese in Burma.

2—The race for Berlin is on, with Anglo-American forces poised to beat the Russians who have made far more tangible progress in this direction.

3—Great Britain and the United States would much prefer to accomplish the "ruthless" destruction of Japan without benefit of Russian bases in order to give them a better advantage at the peace table. Such bases, however, would be accepted in exchange for a costly push against Germany.

Mr. Roosevelt speaks in Ottawa from the steps of the parliament building Wednesday at noon. That means he leaves Quebec Tuesday, and this in turn, means that the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences will end then.

According to White House press secretary Stephen T. Early, the conferences are going along well to the point that Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill were so "caught up" in their work they spent yesterday picnicing and fishing with members of their staffs at a lake north of Quebec.

THERE'S SOMEBODY DOWN IN THAT OLD SCENERY STORE ROOM! GET A LONG ROPE!
8-19
BILL! WHAT ARE YOU DOING DOWN THERE?
WHERE'S LITTLE CORPORAL?
YOU SAY THIS IS THE GARAGE WHERE LITTLE CORPORAL KEEPS HIS CAR?
YES, MR. G-MAN— I SEEN LITTLE CORPORAL DRIVE OUT OF HERE IN HIS BIG CAR WITH MISS GILDA. NO! HE DIDN'T SAY WHERE HE WAS GOING!
MEANWHILE.
WE'LL STOP HERE AT MY FARM AND GET RID OF THIS CAR, MAC.
OKAY, LITTLE CORPORAL!
TEN MINUTES LATER A TRUCK, LOADED WITH CHICKENS, LEAVES THE FARM.
THIS WAS A SMART IDEA OF YOURS, LITTLE CORPORAL! THEY'LL THINK WE'RE TAKING THESE CHICKENS TO MARKET! NO ONE WILL STOP US NOW!
BILL! I'D LIKE A STATEMENT FOR THE EVENING EDITION....
DID YOU FIND ANY TRACE OF LITTLE CORPORAL YET?
HAVE YOU LOCATED HIS CAR?
WHERE'S GILDA, THE ACTRESS!
WE HAVEN'T GOT ANYTHING!
8-21
SAY, BILL — WHEN'S X-9 GETTING BACK FROM OVERSEAS?
THIS CASE IS A HEADACHE! I WISH X-9 WERE HERE NOW!
BILL! X-9'S JUST 'PHONED FROM THE AIRPORT! HE'LL BE HERE IN TWENTY MINUTES!

THERE NOW! YOU'RE WHERE YOU BELONG. NOW LET ME GO DOWN AND SEND DAD HOME AND I'LL BE BACK!
NO-NO! DON'T LET HIM GO! NOT YET!
8-16
THERE'S SOMETHING I MUST TELL YOU. IT-IT CONCERNS THAT HANDKERCHIEF YOUR LITTLE BROTHER FOUND-
THAT HANDKERCHIEF? YES! I'VE WONDERED ABOUT IT!
YOU WERE SO ALARMED WHEN WE FOUND IT.
IT CARRIES A SIGNIFICANCE WHICH LEADS ME TO BELIEVE THAT DANGER IS NEAR.
FORGRAVE
AND EACH NIGHT SINCE THE HANDKERCHIEF WAS FOUND I HAVE SPENT IN CONSTANT FEAR!
OF WHAT, MRS. BETTS?
JUST THE UNEXPECTED, MY DEAR. AND JUST BEFORE YOU CAME WITH YOUR DAD THERE CAME A POUNDING AT MY DOOR.
A POUNDING? AT YOUR DOOR BEFORE I CAME WITH DAD?
8-17
YES, AND THINKING IT WAS THE THING I FEARED, I FAINTED.
WHY, MRS. BETTS! THAT WAS I. I KNOCKED AT YOUR DOOR. I PEEPED IN, SAW YOU ON THE FLOOR AND RAN FOR DAD!
AND IT WAS YOU WHO KNOCKED AT MY DOOR? NOW WASN'T I SILLY TO BEHAVE AS I DID?
ALL YOUR FEARS WERE GROUNDLESS. NOW LET ME RUN DOWN AND SEND DAD HOME!
8-18
PERHAPS SHE'S RIGHT. MY FEARS ARE GROUNDLESS AND I'VE MADE MYSELF ILL OVER NOTHING!
I GUESS IT'S ALL RIGHT FOR BETH TO STAY. THE WOMAN MAY BE CRACKED, BUT SHE'S HARMLESS!
FORGRAVE
I MAKE NO BONES ABOUT IT, BETH. I'LL FEEL BETTER, KNOWING YOU'RE IN THE HOUSE.
I'LL BE JUST ACROSS THE HALL. IF YOU NEED ANYTHING IN THE NIGHT, JUST CALL.

KISKA FALLS TO YANKS AND CANADIANS—JAPANESE FLEE

QUEBEC PLANS MORE TROUBLE FOR JAPANESE

FDR, Churchill Reported Laying Plans For Autumn Drive On Burma, Attack on Fleet.

STILWELL AT SESSION?

U. S., Britain Believed Ready To Fight In Pacific Without Red Aid.

(By United Press)

QUEBEC — Heavy naval and air attacks on Japan's fleet and major cities and an autumn offensive to recapture Burma, were believed today to be among the major military decisions reached at the conferences between President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and their staff chiefs.

This did not mean there would be any relaxation of the Anglo-American effort in Europe, but it was becoming increasingly evident that the Pacific was near, if not at the top, of the agenda at the citadel where the president and Churchill are meeting.

(As they conferred on other phases of the war, Mr. Roosevelt and Canadian Premier W. L. MacKenzie King issued a statement announcing the fall of Kiska to American and Canadian forces, timed to coincide with the same announcement from the navy department in Washington.)

Russian demands to the contrary, the conferees were believed to have decided that the situation in the Pacific is such that it will not permit an all-out concentration against the Germans in Europe to the entire exclusion of Japan.

The Allies were expected to hit twice—in western Europe and at about the same time, in the Pacific. The fall campaign in Burma was decided at the Roosevelt-Churchill conference in Washington last May. Coincident with the Quebec conference was information that a section of the British navy is moving into the Pacific and there were some sources which foresaw a major naval battle with

FIREMAN QUITS

Lurz, Department Member 24 Years, Resigns.

Clarence C. Lurz, 47, city fireman for more than 24 years, today had submitted his resignation to become effective Sept. 1.

Lurz, who lives at 207 Harker street, is eligible to receive a fireman's pension. He became a fireman in 1918 and except for about a year he has been a member of the department continuously since then. He has been at the No. 1 station most of the time.

He said today that he was undecided about his plans, but he thought he would take other employment, indicating that he may apply for a job with the fire department at the Parsel air supply depot near Shelby.

His is the second resignation in the fire department this week. Chief Charles J. Seeburger resigned earlier in the week.

SUB PRAISED

Given Citation For Sinking 60,000 Tons of Jap Shipping.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC PORT — (U.P.) — The submarine Guardfish, commanded by Lieut. Cmd. N. C. Ward of Indianhead, Md., was awarded a presidential citation today for sinking 60,000 tons of Japanese shipping and damaging 14,000 tons in enemy waters.

The citation, signed by Navy Secretary Frank Knox, said the Guardfish was severely bombed on many occasions and once attacked three merchant ships despite sharp gunfire.

GIVES UP PLANS FOR LABOR DAY

Civilian Defense Organization Decides Against Program For Holiday.

Mansfield's civilian defense organization had decided today to give up its plans for a Labor day celebration at the high school stadium, leaving the field open to labor groups to sponsor a program.

It was understood that AFL and CIO units are mapping plans for a limited celebration, but labor leaders were not available today for comment on their tentative program.

Rudy Schneider, AFL chairman, said earlier in the week that there would be no parade this year and most of the other customary entertainment features would have to be forgotten until after the war.

Police Capt. Jess Schwab, Mansfield civilian defense commander, said he and his coworkers had decided it would require too much time to stage the kind of celebration they had in mind.

"We would need at least a month to get our units in shape to put on a program like we considered for the high school field, but we may stage a defense show of our own later next month at some other point," Schwab said. The civilian defense organization had been granted use of the stadium for a Labor day show.

Blood Unit Ends 'Most Successful' Mansfield Visit

This month's visit of the Red Cross Mobile Blood Donor unit has been by far the most successful since the unit started coming to Mansfield, Miss Miriam Hooper, executive secretary of the Richland county Red Cross chapter, said today.

The quotas for Thursday and Friday were filled and it was expected that the schedule today would run as smoothly as the other days.

Twelve people had to be turned away Friday since the quota was filled.

The general response was much better this month. More blood donor cards were returned on time and people who were not able to keep their appointments notified the office beforehand.

The unit will be here again on Sept. 13, 14, and 15.

Seabees Take Only 3 Days To Make Munda U. S. Air Base

EDITOR'S NOTE: The first eyewitness account of American operation of the Munda airfield in New Georgia also discloses that transport as well as fighter planes are using the former Japanese field. Art Burgess, Associated Press war correspondent, tells about Munda's first days as an American flying base in the following delayed dispatch.)

By ART BURGESS

MUNDA AIRFIELD, New Georgia, Aug. 14 (Delayed)—(AP)—Eager Navy Seabees, who refused to let even an enemy air raid stop them, completed a practically new runway at the Munda airfield in the record time of three days and six hours.

The first American plane landed at the field yesterday, just eight days after United States forces had wrested the key base from the Japanese. At the controls was Lt. Coleworth B. Head, jr., 29, of San Francisco, an army fighter pilot.

(Munda Field was the main objective in the American invasion of New Georgia, central Solomons, June 30. In Washington this week, Col. Laurence C. Sherman, army intelligence chief in the south Pacific, said its seizure raised a direct threat to Rabaul, the big Japanese base on New Britain.)

The bomb-splattered field underwent remarkable change once the navy's construction battalions started work, on a day and night schedule.

When the job was just getting under way, the Seabees' com-

GENERALS DEAD

Illness Reported Fatal to Two High on German Staff.

LONDON —(AP)— The Berlin radio in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press last night reported the deaths of two high-ranking German generals—Colonel-General Hans Jesschonnek, 44-year-old airforce chief of staff, and Major-General Chamier-Gliszenski described as the inventor of many war weapons.

General Jesschonnek died at the headquarters of Reisch Marshal Hermann Goering following a "serious illness," the broadcast said. He was once known as the youngest general of his rank in the German army and was raised to chief of the airforce staff last December. Cause of death was given as a "malignant disease."

General Chamier-Glisenzenski was identified as the director of the Peenemunde research laboratory which was bombed by the RAF on Aug. 17.

Goering Tells Fliers He's Ashamed Of Way They Fight.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA — (U.P.)— Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, commander-in-chief of the German air force, has informed his men that he is "ashamed" of them because they no longer "love battles," it was revealed today.

Allied troops captured in Sicily an order signed by Goering and bearing a July date. He took his men to task, lamenting that their "aggressive spirit" was disappearing.

'Billy' Phelps, Famed Yale Professor, Dies After Stroke

(By International News Service)

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — Dr. William Lyon Phelps, professor emeritus of Yale university and one of the nation's leading educators, died early today at his New Haven home. He was 78.

"Billy" Phelps, beloved by thousands of Yale university students, had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage last June. However, last month he recovered sufficiently to be taken home from the hospital where he had been for several weeks, but last Sunday he suffered a relapse from which he never recovered.

Dr. Phelps, widely-known as lecturer, author and critic, retired as a member of Yale's English faculty in 1933 after having served the university for some 41 years. He waged an almost ceaseless war on American slang, which he at-

TAX PAYMENTS 'PERFECT' FOR NINTH TIME

Real Estate Collections End With $691,000 Figure In Sight, Payne Says.

MAIL PILING UP

Treasurer Asserts Delinquency Reduced From $543,000 to $100.000 Figure.

For the ninth consecutive real estate tax period, Richland county taxpayers paid 100 per cent of the total charge.

When the deadline on the current collection arrived last night, $636,578 had been collected toward the total charge of $691,000. Treasurer Charles Payne said checks still arriving by mail and reports from the village collectors would put the collection well over the total charge.

Payne credited the 100 per cent or more collection of the last four years to not only the payment of the current charge but also the payment of delinquent taxes.

He said that in 1933, the peak of the tax delinquency, Richland county real estate owners owed $543,000 in back taxes.

Since that time the amount has been gradually reduced until it stood at $100,000 at the beginning of the present tax collection. With a 102 per cent collection last year the total delinquency was reduced $25,000, the treasurer said.

Better business conditions, higher wages, and increased employment are factors contributing to continued 100 per cent payments, it was pointed out.

Payne said he expects to have the final report on the tax collection by the end of next week when reports from the village collectors and payments by mail have been completely tabulated.

Workers kept busy taking in tax payments have not been able to enter on the books the numerous payments made by checks arriving in each mail, Payne said.

Yesterday, the last day for paying taxes without an extra 10 per cent assessment, county real estate owners paid $36,324.

READY TO TALK

Finland to Seek Way Out Of War, Say Reports.

STOCKHOLM — (U.P.) — The newspaper Nya Dagligh Allehanda said today that Finland was prepared to take up negotiations for a separate peace to be conducted by way of Stockholm but without formal Swedish assistance.

The newspaper's flat assertion that the Fins are ready to seek a way out of the war was published without a dateline and without making clear the source of the report.

It followed a Helsinki dispatch which said delegations representing a number of political groups called on President Risto Ryti yesterday and demanded that the government investigate the possibility of peace with Russia.

Enemy Evacuates Key Aleutian Base After Relentless Bombing

Heavy Allied Guns Continue To Rock Italy

Attacks By Sea and Air Continue to Batter Mainland Targets.

(By United Press)

The Allied sea and air campaign in the Mediterranean punished Italy relentlessly today driving her toward the promised end of devastation and defeat.

American and British warships and planes raked the mainland lines of communications with a steady fire, cutting off the Axis lines of retreat and obviously looking to the day when Allied troops will go ashore.

American vessels bombarded the Gulf of Gioia on the top of the toe of the Italian boot for the second time in 36 hours Thursday, setting fires at Gioia Tauro, on the coastal railroad which had been worked over Wednesday.

Up the coast toward Naples, British warships were reported to have sunk seven landing craft off Scalea while the Allied bombing attack ranged from the railway network in southern Italy to the yards in the Naples area. Fourteen enemy fighters were shot down.

Significance of these continuous attacks was shown in a statement from Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, Allied ground commander in the Sicilian campaign, who told a press conference that the Sicilian conquest put Germany in a jam and clinched the ultimate defeat of the Axis.

The Germans know now, he said, that they face an onslaught slowly closing down on them—an onslaught that will take time but will have definite victory as the end.

Katherine Cornell Wins Plaudits In Real-Life Rescue

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass. — (INS) — Katherine Cornell was receiving plaudits today for a rescue role—but it was in real life, not on the stage.

The actress clambered down a steep ravine near her summer home "Chip Chop" to release an Ohio clergyman who had been pinned by a falling boulder.

She applied a make-shift splint to the leg of Rev. Richard Zeisler of Columbus, and then drove him to Martha's Vineyard hospital.

The clergyman's foot had been caught in the rocks. Struggling to free himself, he dislocated a boulder which fell across his left leg.

The hospital reported he had a compound fracture.

MEDAL GIVEN

Ohio Soldier Who Braved Plane Flames Decorated.

SALT LAKE CITY — (AP) — Pvt. Edward V. Kopicki of Toronto, O., stationed at Camp Haan, Calif., has been awared the soldier's medal for outstanding heroism in rescuing occupants from a burning airplane July 26.

The army citation read: "Despite the menace of exploding ammunition and gasoline tanks and with utter disregard for his personal safety, Private Kopicki rushed to a burning plane which had crashed at Camp Haan and assisted in rescue of the entire crew."

CHICAGO — (INS) — The American Retail Coal association declared today in telegrams to federal authorities that rationing of coal is wholly unnecessary and would only result in increased costs to the consumer.

Invasion Started Aug. 15, Navy Says; Troops Encounter No Opposition. Find Signs of Hasty Flight By Japanese Garrison.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The navy announced today that United States and Canadian troops have recaptured Jap-held Kiska island in the Aleutians without opposition—marking the first time in the history of the war that the Japs have turned tail and fled without fighting.

Breaking a silence which had masked North Pacific operations since July 30, the navy, in a communique, said that the Yanks and Canadians landed on Kiska on Aug. 15, to find that the enemy had hastily evacuated the island.

At the same time, it was revealed by the naval high command that American forces in the first 14 days of August had carried out 106 air bombardments on Kiska, while surface units of the navy had shelled enemy positions on the island 15 times.

The Allied attack forces encountered light anti-aircraft fire during bombing raids on Aug. 13, but on Aug. 14 the Japs failed to return any fire when naval units shelled the island four times at hourly intervals.

The navy said that "it is not known how the Japs got away." However, it was explained that it was possible that enemy surface ships reached Kiska under cover of heavy fogs to evacuate their troops.

The capture of Kiska was regarded as both strategically and diplomatically important. It marked the first time that the Japanese have lost face and fled since their sneak punch on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941.

In the past the Japs have fought to the last man as they

TOLL: American Losses In Sicilian Seizure Set at 7,400

(By United Press)

FIFTEENTH ARMY GROUP HEADQUARTERS, Sicily, Aug. 20.—(Delayed)—Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, Allied ground commander in the Mediterranean theater, revealed today that 7,300 American soldiers were killed, wounded or captured in the conquest of Sicily, which he said clinched the ultimate defeat of Germany.

The 38-day campaign put the Germans in the worst predicament they have yet faced, Alexander told Anglo-American war correspondents at a press conference.

"The Germans are in a jam," he said. "We are closing in on them now. We are bound to win now and the Germans must be thinking they are bound to lose. We've got them all right, but it will take time."

The British suffered the heaviest casualties in the Sicilian campaign, losing 11,835 dead, wounded and missing, he reported, while

TRICK: Nazis Fly Captured Forts But Don't Fight Ours

(By Associated Press)

U. S. EIGHTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN BRITAIN—German airmen are flying captured American Flying Fortresses alongside our formations over France and Germany, but thus far have made no attempt to interfere with our operations, it was disclosed here today.

What the enemy's plan is has not emerged—perhaps the hope is to sneak one or more ships into the raiding squadrons and open the guns against all those about.

The American system of identifying Fortresses among each other is being changed at irregular intervals, however, and the formations fly so closely together that there is little opportunity for a successful effort to sneak into them.

So far the German-flown captives have been kept a good distance away.

The .50 caliber ammunition of the type used by the Fortresses is not manufactured in Germany and if the enemy attempted to change the guns and mounts in the captured ships it would be a costly and doubtful business.

The use of one Fortress to attack another also is not very feasible because the four-engined bomber is not designed for that work.

The Americans lost about 450 Fortresses in one year of operations and of this number probably 50 per cent got down in fairly good condition.

Of that 50 per cent, perhaps 20 per cent could be put into operation again without too much difficulty.

Reconnaissance photographs have shown Flying Fortresses on the ground at German experimental air fields.

IN THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

WASHINGTON — These frequent meetings between Roosevelt and Churchill provide the headlines and newspaper photographs to drive home to the most reluctant mind one of the chief realties about our national security.

They provide the most personal evidence of how completely British and American affairs are mixed up together now in this war.

Will it be equally clear in our country that this interdependence needs to continue? Is not that a question that congress and public discussion generally should answer? Why should not congress express its judgment about that?

Clapper

It will gain us nothing for Mr. Roosevelt to go on blissfully planning post-war cooperation with Britain if our congress is hostile, as it was when Wilson proposed a close three-way arrangement with Britain and France a quarter of a century ago. It is time now to face these questions. We ought to know how America, how congress, as distinct from the White House, feels. For we cannot go very far on a foreign policy that does not have the solid support of the American people. We can argue with people as to what the policy ought to be but unless they are convinced that it is wise and necessary to American interests, not much will come of it.

Circumstances that make us joint operators now in war, will give us joint interests in the future world. If we must combine forces now to carry through for our own best interests, would we not be stronger if we kept that community of interest in mind from here on? If Britain and ourselves need each other to win a war, we will need each other to keep it won. Break us apart and each is left the weaker.

World order will, in the end, have to rest on a base much broader than Anglo-American relations. Among others, it must include Russia to be fully successful. But we don't know what Russia is going to do. Any expectations concerning relations with Russia must be highly speculative. But we know where the British stand. Their self-interest needs America. The U. S.-U. K. supply line is the jugular vein of Britain.

We have a traditional fear of being outsmarted by the British, and of thinking they will use us. It should be the other way around. They need us, and they are always fearful that we will run out as we did after the last war. We have most of the gold in the world. We will finish the war with the largest shipping fleet in the world. Our air force will probably outsize the rest of the world put together.

We have the big stack of blue chips. If our politicians who are always afraid of the British putting something over would only recognize that we have the chips, then we could go ahead on a regular horse trading basis with the British to the advantage of both of us. There need be no sentiment in this. No Irishman need lay his harp aside in shame. It is a business proposition for both sides, if nothing more.

You have to admit that Churchill is a tough old rooster and he can drive a hard bargain. Even Roosevelt may sometimes get buck fever as he goes into a big negotiation. But we have the chips to impress even Churchill if we play our hand well. Otherwise I am not at all concerned about Americans not being able to take care of themselves in negotiations with the British. After all, poker is the American national game.

Anyway, with congress and public strongly recognizing a fundamental community of interest between Britain and ourselves, many of the specific adjustments between us in postwar matters will become much simpler to handle.

The most dangerous thing is to have no policy, and thereby to drive our best friends shopping elsewhere, such as to Moscow.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

NEW YORK—At a time when Paul McNutt is drafting fathers, when American men and women are frozen to their tasks and the maritime service is short of merchant sailors to man the ships, the National Maritime Union, a communist party-line organization of the CIO, is able to spare more than a thousand men, ostensibly sailors, to picket the New York World-Telegram. The picket line was an attempt to intimidate the paper into suppressing these dispatches, which have factually revealed misconduct at sea by communist unioneers, including drunkenness, insubordination, and persistent harassment and derision of patriotic bluejackets and young officers of the navy detailed to serve the guns on these vessels.

Pegler

Invariably, when the communistic penetration of the merchant service is held up to public notice and the conspiracy to establish the alien communist, Harry Bridges, on the eastern seaboard is dwelt upon, the maritime union cries up the sacrifices of men who have lost their lives or suffered terrible hardships and dangers at sea, as though this record somehow were to the credit of Joseph Curran, president of the union, who has taken no part in the war at sea but on the contrary, obtained deferment in the draft for the sole reason that he is a unioneer faithful to the communist party line.

These sacrifices by men who may have been unwilling members of the union, driven into its ranks by the labor policy of the national government, were accentuated again during the picketing of the World-Telegram. The demonstration made no attempt, however, to refute the truth but had for its purpose only the suppression of public knowledge of the conspiracy to establish communistic control of both shipping and the loading of ships on all our coasts.

The answer to the emphasis on bravery and sacrifice by party-line, shore-side boss-unioneers was stated in salty language a few months ago by a publication called the West Coast Sailor, official organ of the sailors' union of the Pacific, an anti-communist organization whose president is Harry Lundeberg, who hates and fights Curran and Bridges because he has their number.

"There are those who use the plight of the seamen to obtain cheap benefits and cheap glory for themselves, such as Joe Curran and the NMU officialdom who are breaking their necks to get in the public eye, by trading on the misery of the seamen," said Lundeberg's editorial. "They care nothing about the welfare of the men themselves but are only concerned with advancing their phony front organizations and themselves. They do their fighting on soapboxes in 'second-front' rallies staged by the communist party.

"We are of the opinion that it is more than a little ghoulish to use the killing and maiming of our members in order to gain a little cheap publicity for the organization or for any individual."

There was no reason to believe that all or even a majority of the thousand-odd pickets had ever been to sea at all, except perhaps on the ships which brought some of them over from Europe to attempt to substitute communism and dictatorship for the American form of government. They were the familiar, Union Square type of demonstrators.

Curran's record in this war was one of faithful collaboration with Hitler and nazism while Britain stood alone in Europe and Africa and Germany and Russia were allies. After Hitler attacked Russia, Curran demanded immediate intervention by the United States.

And, in an open letter to me last May he said: "In my opinion, this war did not become a people's war until the Soviet Union was attacked."

FOUR ARRESTED

Await Grand Jury Action In Youngstown Racket Probe.

YOUNGSTOWN —(INS)— Four men, arrested as material witnesses, were free under bond today to await the grand jury meeting in Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert's investigation of the Youngstown lottery racket.

All four were reported to be key figures in the special investigation in which some of the biggest figures in the numbers game were indicted recently by the grand jury.

FACES THREAT OF SEIZURE IN OUTPUT INQUIRY

Wright Plant at Lockland to Be Taken Over If Production Fails to Improve.

(By United Press)

CINCINNATI — The Wright Aeronautical Corp. already defendant in government suits charging lax manufacturing practices, today faced the threat of army seizure of its Lockland plant unless the production of airplane engines there was increased immediately.

The warning was issued by Sen. Harry Truman, D., Mo., chairman of a special senate investigating committee, at the close of a one-day inquiry of war production at the Lockland plant.

Truman's ultimatum, made at a press conference attended by three other members of the committee, was the second warning given the company within a few hours to effect a quick return to normal production in the engine works.

Maj. Gen. Oliver P. Echols testified before the committee that production at the Lockland plant decreased 85 per cent after release of a Truman committee report July 11. The Wright management had been ordered, Echols said, to "bring up production to what it was or get out," although he said no time limit had been set.

Sen. Mon C. Wallgren, D., Wash., also testifying at the public hearing, said fliers with whom he had talked complained that Wright Lockland engines were troublesome "both in training and on the fighting front."

He said the Wright situation and "another similar to it at United States Steel are due to what I call the FMP's—Folding Money Patriots—who stress production at the expense of quality."

Truman, in his warning to the company, described airplane production as a whole as "the greatest the world has ever seen" but he added that "there are a few sore spots and the Lockland one was the worst we uncovered."

"Either there must be improvement in the management of that plant," Truman said, "or the army will be asked to take it over and run it."

SIX ARRESTED

Five Face Charges of Driving At Excessive Speed.

Six motorists were arrested by state patrolmen and city police yesterday, five on charges of speeding and one on a charge of operating an automobile without a permit.

Arrested Friday on U. S. Route 42 for speeding, Ludwig Zahn, 103 Wolfe avenue, forfeited $16.30 bond in Mansfield municipal court when he failed to appear for hearing this morning.

Clark R. Buchanan, truck driver of West Salem R. D. 2, was cited into municipal court Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. on a charge of speeding on U. S. Route 42.

Howard Hall, Delaware, Dorcie H. Banks, Columbus, and W. J. Tupps, Mansfield R. D. 4, signed waivers and posted $16.30 bond in municipal court on charges of speeding on U. S. Route 42.

AFL Turns Down Plan to Get Out Next Primary Vote.

COLUMBUS—(INS)— A proposal to declare a statewide "labor holiday" on next state primary election day "to get out the labor vote" was thrown into the discard today by the AFL Ohio Building and Construction Trades Council.

The proposal was submitted to 200 delegates yesterday but was defeated by a 100-32 vote. The delegates then unanimously passed a resolution "opposing any action by the War Labor Board, or any related agency, which interferes with the legal procedure and enforcement of Ohio's prevailing wage law."

FISHER CHECKS BRANDY'S COST

Says Ohio Will Buy a Lot If Wholesalers Will Give Lower Price.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—A report that the state had been charged $10 more a case for an imported brandy than the price paid by individual permitholders was under investigation today by Liquor Director Don Fisher.

State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson wrote Fisher that five local permitholders bought 300 cases of Cordon Rue Portuguese brandy from Star Liquor Dealers, Inc., of Long Island, N. Y., for $27.43 a case under purchase permits issued by the liquor department, May 20 and 21.

He asked the director to explain why a department contract for 5,000 cases of the same brand from the William Bauer company of Cleveland listed the price at $38.67 a case, or about $10 more after deducting shipping charges.

Fisher said he would seek a solution to the price discrepancy although "I don't see how the Star Dealers can sell imported brandy for $27.43 a case when they have to pay $18.10 in federal taxes in addition to handling expenses," he added.

"If Star dealers will sell Ohio that particular brandy for $27.43 a case, we'll buy all they have," he declared.

READING CLUBS TO END PROGRAM

Course To Be Finished Sept. 4, Librarian Announces.

Children's reading clubs at the Mansfield Public library will end Sept. 4, Miss Myra Lorimer, children's librarian, announced today.

All book reports in both the younger and older children's clubs must be finished by that time. Thirty-nine members of the older club have earned their certificates so far.

Four children have finished their third year with the club and each will receive a book for reporting on ten books each year.

George B. Ganyard knows one of those very funny jokes about a woman driver. And like most of them it is supposed to be true. The lady in question driving down a Mansfield street and suddenly made a right hand turn without any warning. Not anticipating such a move the man in the car behind was unable to stop and ran into her. Indignantly (the other fellow is always in the wrong) they both got out of their cars and proceeded to battle stations. "Why didn't you hold out your hand when you were going to turn," the irate male demanded. "Why," the astounded woman replied, "I turn here every day."

Told that he's like the cobbler whose children don't have any shoes, City Street Superintendent C. H. Hebel has done something about the rough alley that leads from Mulberry street to the city building. While Hebel has been busy all summer repairing streets and alleys in other parts of the city, the alley that his department uses most in going to and from work was permitted to get so rough that cars could hardly travel it. Reminded of the cobbler story by Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff, Hebel had his street workers repair the alley, giving it the same surface treatment other streets have received.

SITS IN JAIL ON 16TH BIRTHDAY

Girl Waits Completion of State Case Charging Her With Murders.

(By United Press)

BURLINGTON, Ky. — Joan Kiger, charged with the murder of her father and young brother, observed her 16th birthday anniversary in Boone county jail today as authorities prepared evidence for submission at her preliminary hearing Tuesday.

Raymond L. Vincent, commonwealth attorney, said yesterday "we think we have a motive" for the slaying of Carl C. Kiger, 49, vice mayor and city commissioner of Covington, Ky., and his son, Jerry, 6.

"We feel we have sufficient evidence to hold Miss Kiger to the grand jury on the charge of murdering her father and brother," Vincent said. "We have not closed the door to any further clues or evidence."

Joan attended funeral services for her father and brother yesterday and wept openly at their biers. She was accompanied by her brothers, Marine Lieutenant Joseph Kiger and Naval Seaman John Kiger.

Mrs. Jenny Kiger, wounded by one of the shots during the early Monday morning fusillade at the Kiger home, was not permitted to attend the services. Informed of the murder charge against Joan, she said she believed implicitly her daughter's story that an unknown intruder in the house fired the shots.

NEW TAX PLAN BEING READIED FOR CONGRESS

Revenue of 40 Billions For Year Seen In Program of Congressional Expert.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — A new tax plan by one of the leading congressional tax experts—designed to increase federal revenue and build individual and business reserves against a post-war depression—was expected today to get early consideration by congress.

The author, an influential member of one of the congressional tax committees, declined use of his name.

He estimated that his proposed revision of federal taxes would yield the treasury $40,000,000,000 a year compared with the anticipated $38,500,000,000 for this year. On that basis it still would fall far short of the $12,000,000,000 additional taxes, savings, or both, already being asked by the treasury for 1944.

The proposal would replace the present voluntary war bond purchases with an "induced savings" plan tied up with slight revision of individual and corporate income tax rates.

The five major steps would be:

1. Substitute for war bonds a new type of non-negotiable, interest-bearing government bonds, redeemable after the war.

2. Permit tax "credits" for purchase of such bonds, up to 15 per cent of taxable net income, to induce their purchase.

3. Increase from six to "eight or even 10 per cent" the "normal" individual income tax rate. Leave the individual surtax rate unchanged.

4. Increase the corporate and surtax rate from 40 to 45 per cent.

5. Increase the excess profits tax rate from 90 to 95 per cent, but increase the post-war credit from 10 to 15 per cent. The 80 per cent unrecoverable would remain unchanged.

The whole point of the program, its author said, is to permit both corporations and individuals to build adequate post-war reserves while financing a large share of the war costs on a current basis.

ENDS PROGRAM

Crossing Elimination to Be Finished Soon.

With the completion of the double railroad crossing elimination project on Trimble road the county highway department will finish its small construction program for the year, County Engineer Howard Sword said today.

He said grading would be completed Monday on the rerouting of the road to eliminate the B. and O. and Pennsylvania crossings. This stretch of road has long been known as "dead man's crossing," because several were killed there in years past.

The road is being rerouted to run alongside the Pennsylvania tracks and connect with Bowman street.
